The music program at Carmel High School is in jeopardy because of the cutbacks at Middle School, the Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District was warned at its special meeting Feb. 5. LIBRARY, COUNTY ATTEMPT TO RESOLVE FUNDING DISPUTE
The Harrison Memorial Library and the county "are back at the negotiating table" in an attempt to resolve their contract dispute. The library board decided at its Jan. 10 meeting that unless county funds of $162,720 are received by March 1, the library will suspend services to non-Carmel residents. See Page 16.

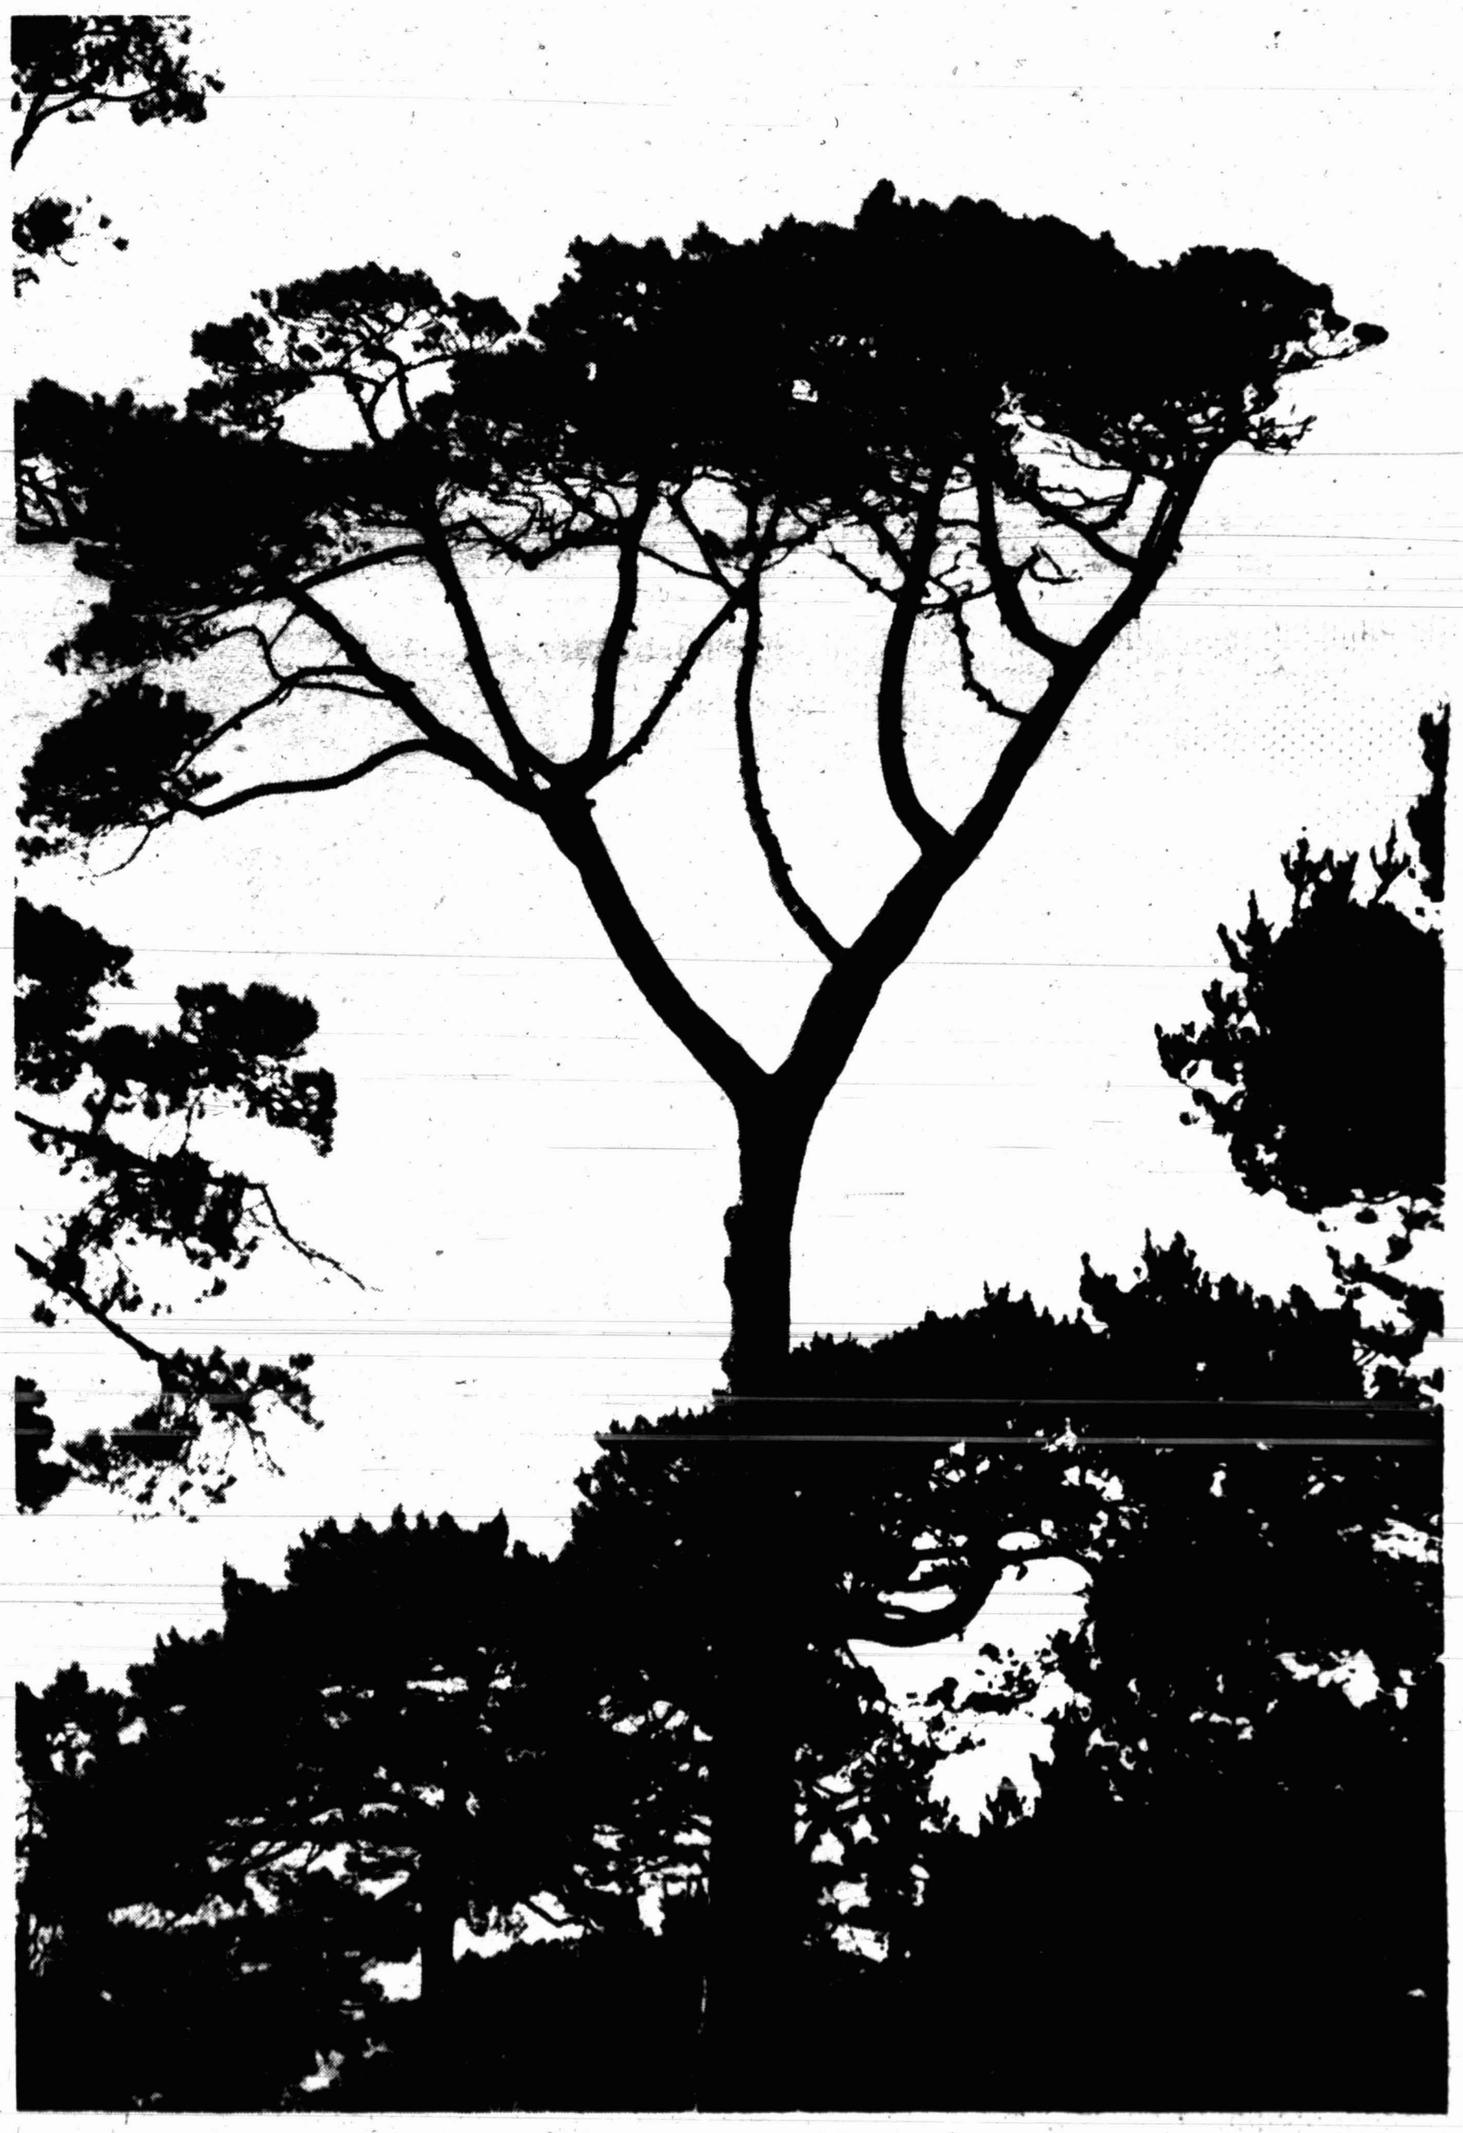
'The Heart Tree'



MAYOR GUNNAR NORBERG can take heart this Valentine's Day as he gazes up at the towering pine located on the southwest corner of Casanova and Seventh. Like everyone who discerns images of people and animals in drifting clouds, Norberg ascribed the characteristic of a heart to this very pine 22 years ago when the City Council threatened to have it razed. To save it from a certain end, Norberg ran for a City Council seat and won. The tree still stands. Norberg calls it "The Heart Tree." (George T.C. Smith photo)

Enjoyed '70s Review'

Dear Editor:

Like other readers, I too, enjoyed The '70s: A Decade in Review, and suggest you encourage your special reporter, now so well informed through her recent research, to nominate the major problems of Carmel in the '80s, perhaps with reader input.

In the forthcoming council election we have a choice between excellent candidates, and it could help voters if they knew these candidates' positions on major issues.

Need sense of humor

Dear Ben and Gwen:

Frankly, the "brilliance" of your agreement escapes me.

One of numerous changes which would be beneficial to city of Carmel politics is the addition (return?) of a collective sense of humor.

P.S. May the best Howard win.

'Life is Life'

Dear Editor:

In response to Scott Beasley's letter to the editor dated Feb. 7, "Life at The River":

I have been working at Rippling River for almost a year now as an aide and have had an opportunity to see and feel most of the people here.

Life is life as far as I can understand it. No matter if one is handicapped or not. We are given choices in life. We can choose to sit in our rooms and smoke pot and drink beer or we can get involved in whatever life has to offer. The choices are limitless.

Some of the most severely handicapped people at Rippling River are the most creative.

True there could be more positive energy here to get things moving, but in reality it is our own personal responsibility to take charge of our lives and direct it into channels that are healthy and wholesome. Perhaps then Rippling River will become a rehabilitation center. It certainly has all the makings for a very fine one.

All we need now are people who are willing to rehabilitate themselves, then perhaps the help will come that is so badly needed.

CVPOA opposes sewers

Dear Editor:

I think that our board, representing 1,000 Carmel Valley Property Owners Association members, is an accurate reflector of Valley opinion.

At our last meeting the board said clearly, "At this time and with our present population we do not want a $47 million interceptor and collection sewer system in the Valley."

I am positive that if an election were to be held tomorrow for annexation of the Valley to the Carmel Sanitary District it would be turned down by a huge majority.

We do concede that at some time in the future an interceptor may be built in the Valley. If that happens it will be because the underground aquifer, the source of drinking water for the entire Peninsula, has become endangered. In such case a county Health Department order would result in sewering the Valley. Such action would be taken to protect everyone who uses water from that aquifer.

Since the only reason for spending $47 millon would be to benefit the entire Peninsula, logically the entire Peninsula should bear the cost.

I cannot sufficiently emphasize this point. Obligation to protect the purity of our water supply lies with the Monterey Peninsula Regional Water District and with the Cal-American Water Co.

Any costs involved in protecting the purity of their source of water should be borne by all water users and not be limited to Carmel Valley residents.

Lovely memories

Dear Editor:

I am so glad you're showing some of Pat Hathaway's collection again. Brings back lovely memories.

Also glad that Dock Lor's restaurant is to stay. Carmel wouldn't be Carmel without it.

Nice to hear from Ben. Glad your cat liked the catnip. My cousin in New Hampshire makes catnip tea to cure her friends with bad colds. Shall I send more?

Reporter asked to leave

City committee bars press, public from its meeting

THE PRESS AND PUBLIC were barred from the Feb. 8 meeting of the Land Use Committee of the Carmel Planning Commission by committee chairman Donald Davidson.

Davidson, who arrived 45 minutes late for the 2 p.m. session at City Hall, declared that the meeting was closed to the public, and asked Pine Cone reporter Keith Yates to leave.

Davidson did not give any reason for closing the meeting to the public.

The committee was scheduled to discuss a controversial ordinance that would establish a use permit system to allow certain types of retail businesses on second and third floors in the commercial district.

•

THE PROPOSED ordinance grew out of the Canton restaurant-Dick Bruhn affair.

The ordinance is intended to allow Bruhn to expand his Back Pocket clothing store into the Canton restaurant space and the floor above it on Ocean near Mission.

Bruhn has agreed to rent the existing Back Pocket space on Mission just south of Ocean to the Canton at a below-market rate in exchange for permission to use the second floor.

•

THE CARMEL PLANNING Commission referred the proposed ordinance to its Land Use Committee after a public hearing on Feb. 4.

It was Davidson who suggested that the matter be referred to the committee that he chairs. The other members of the Land Use Committee are commissioners John Logan and James Wright.

Davidson said that the Brown Act (the state "Open Government Meeting Law") allowed him to close the meeting to the public. "This (committee meeting) is less than half the membership of the Planning Commission," he said, "and I can declare it closed."

The Brown Act states: "the people (of California) do not yield their sovereignty to the agencies which serve them. The people insist on remaining informed so that they may retain control over the instruments they have created."

City Attorney George Brehmer told the Pine Cone that under the Brown Act, the public could be barred from meetings of committees of the Planning Commission because those committees constitute less than a quorum of the commission.

Pine knots:

'Go slow' on annex plans for library

By AL EISNER

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES of the Harrison Memorial Library wants to use $500,000 of its endowment fund to build an annex on the northwest corner of Lincoln and Sixth for a children's library.

And now, the city is considering condemnation proceedings to purchase two parcels of property adjacent to the above site. That would cost in excess of $250,000 for sure, since the city's offer of $120,000 for one of the lots was turned down by the owner (see story elsewhere in this issue).

While the problem caused by lack of space has been brewing for a long time, I hope the library and the City Council will take a "go-slow" approach on the construction of such an expensive addition to the village library services.

Trying to figure out library financing is a little like poking a stick into a hornet's nest. Our Harrison Memorial Library is mighty costly to Carmel taxpayers. Because county residents outside the city limits also use the facility, the county contributes an annual stipend that some people say really doesn't cover the additional costs.

For the last 10 years, various librarians and members of the library board have tried to expand the size of the library. The city decided in 1971 to build a completely new library at Sunset Center and convert the Harrison Memorial Library into shops and offices (and perhaps a new city hall?). When the issue was put to a vote, however, Carmel voters overwhelmingly rejected the idea.

When it became apparent only recently that the county was not going to build a branch library at the mouth of Carmel Valley, the space problem gained new attention.

•

ONE OF THE OBVIOUS solutions to the space problem is to relocate the children's collection at city-owned Sunset Center. There's plenty of room in the facility and it would be free to the city. Also, there is ample parking available in the various Sunset parking areas.

The library board rejected the idea, however, citing the objections of a group of parents who said separating library services would upset a Carmel tradition. That tradition—one which I've never heard of—is for parents and children to go to the library together.

Building an expensive annex in the heart of the downtown area would only impact the traffic and parking congestion.

It should be remembered that there are only a handful of school-age children residing within the city limits. I would wager that the children that are being served by our library are primarily county residents. While the county does give the city a partial subsidy to service non-city residents, does that justify such a huge expenditure for a new building?

•

WHILE DIVIDING library services may not be as effective as having an annex across the street, the convenience would have to be weighed carefully against the stupendous cost.

It is unlikely that the issue would be placed on the ballot to be decided by the voters, because an annex would almost certainly go down to defeat.

I know the library trustees are aware that $750,000 is a lot of money. I think the donors of those funds would be equally as happy to see it used for books instead of buildings. Invested at 12 percent, $750,000 will yield $90,000 a year. That could pay for a lot of books, or extra librarians.

CV Master Plan, Rancho Canada Lodge targets of legal action

Carmel to file lawsuits against county

By STEVE HELLMAN

LAWSUITS ATTACKING the new Carmel Valley Master Plan and the use permit for the planned Rancho Canada Lodge will be filed within one month by the city of Carmel.

The City Council directed City Attorney George Brehmer on Feb. 11 to prepare the two lawsuits against Monterey County.

Action came during an executive session following the council's regular meeting Monday night. The vote for both suits was unanimous, according to City Administrator Doug Peterson.

Brehmer told the Pine Cone Tuesday that the lawsuits are prompted by the county Board of Supervisors' approval of the Master Plan on Jan. 15. The Master Plan calls for building a maximum of 2,500 new units in the next 20 years.

•

ONE LAWSUIT WILL ask the county to prepare an Environmental Impact Report for the Master Plan, Brehmer said. He added that the city may seek an injunction to halt implementation of the Master Plan until the lawsuit is resolved.

"Others may be joining us in the lawsuits," Brehmer said, but he declined to name the persons or organizations.

Supervisors approved a negative declaration for the Master Plan last July.

They changed major provisions in the Master Plan afterward, then brushed aside demands from the city of Carmel, the Carmel Area Coalition, and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association for the more stringent and time-consuming EIR.

•

THE SECOND LAWSUIT, Brehmer explained, will ask that the county rescind its approval of the use permit for the 175-room Rancho Canada Lodge at the mouth of the Valley.

Supervisors approved the use permit last August over strong objections from Carmel, the Carmel Area Coalition, numerous landowners and residents and two of the supervisors, Sam Farr of Carmel and Dusan Petrovic of King City.

The Carmel council charged in a resolution that the lodge project simply was not a proper use for the land, which lies within the city's "zone of influence."

The council requested that the supervisors postpone action on the lodge use permit application until after the county adopted the new Master Plan. But the supervisors voted 3-2 on Aug. 21 to approve the use permit. All five council members stated at the time that they were willing to file a lawsuit immediately.

Brehmer explained Tuesday that the council decided to withhold litigation while the county hammered out final revisions in the 20-year Master Plan.

The supervisors voted unanimously on Jan. 15 to adopt the Master Plan, complete with the major controversial changes that would allow the Rancho Canada Lodge; development on the Odello family land at the Valley's mouth, and 500 condominium units proposed for the Carmel Valley Ranch development.

•

"ADOPTION OF THE Master Plan brought our concerns into focus," Brehmer said.

"The Master Plan was approved with the provision that the (Rancho Canada) lodge is a satisfactory use for that land," he continued.

The lawsuit, which will name the county and the developer, Nick Lombardo, will focus on what Brehmer termed "legal inequities." He said, "The fact that the Master Plan was not completed at the time that the county approved the use permit for the lodge is important."

Opponents argued last August that the lodge project would cause increased traffic, over-demand on water supply and an adverse effect on the Valley's residential character impacts which they said should be reviewed through the Master Plan.

•

AN INJUNCTION TO prohibit work on the lodge until the lawsuit is resolved may be requested, Brehmer added.

Construction has been stalled by a condition of the use permit that the 175-room lodge connect to the Carmel Sanitary District. The sanitary district has a ban on connections, although it is negotiating with Lombardo for a connection in exchange for use of reclaimed wastewater on his two golf courses.

'The city's lawsuit is self-serving. They're afraid of competition, that I'll take away tourists and hotel revenue. Why else would they (the council) try to squeeze the last drop of blood from me? The people of this community have accepted my project.' — Nick Lombardo, developer of Rancho Canada Lodge.

The litigation against Rancho Canada Lodge could be resolved by the other lawsuit against the Master Plan, Brehmer explained.

•

"IF THE MASTER PLAN litigation prevails," he said, "an EIR will be prepared. We would hope that the EIR deems the land at Rancho Canada Golf Course unsuitable for the lodge."

Brehmer would not confirm, however, whether the EIR would force the county to rescind its approval of Lombardo's use permit.

"It will be up to the real party in interest (Lombardo) to withdraw his project," Brehmer said, "or we will proceed with our lawsuit against his lodge."

The only other condition which would prompt the city to withdraw its lawsuit against the lodge, Brehmer said, would be if Lombardo agreed to reduce the size of his project.

Lombardo has already scaled down his plan from 376 to 175 rooms after failing to win approval in 1978.

•

LOMBARDO CHARGED Tuesday that the city's lawsuit is "self-serving." He said, "They're afraid of competition, that I'll take away tourists and hotel revenue.

"Why else would they (the council) try to squeeze the last drop of blood from me?" he said.

Lombardo added that the fact that the present council has continued its opposition to his project "makes it (the council) irrelevant."

"The people of this community have accepted my project," he claimed.

•

THE CITY MAY seek an injunction to halt implementation of the new Master Plan while the lawsuit concerning the EIR is being resolved, Brehmer said.

The county Planning Commission is scheduled to consider six new ordinances to implement the Master Plan on Feb. 27.

Brehmer said that the city could set aside its lawsuit if the county agrees to order an EIR.

"If the county decides to order an EIR, this would definitely resolve our dispute," Brehmer said.

•

THE GROUNDS FOR an EIR have been solidified since the supervisors approved the negative declaration, Brehmer said.

He cited a state appeals court ruling that was issued on Dec. 27 in the case of the city of Santa Ana versus the city of Garden Grove in Orange County.

The trial court had ruled that Garden Grove was not required to prepare an EIR on an amendment to its General Plan, although Santa Ana argued that an EIR was required by state guidelines, Brehmer explained.

•

"THE STATE OFFICE of Planning and Research (OPR) has guidelines that require an EIR for an amendment to a local General Plan," Brehmer said.

The Carmel Valley Master Plan was approved as an amendment to the county's General Plan.

But the requirement for an EIR on an amendment is not part of the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), Brehmer acknowledged. OPR, which is in charge of enforcing CEQA, put the requirement into its guidelines. The California Environmental Quality Act established the EIR process for projects that may have a significant adverse impact on the environment.

The appeals court ruled that the amendment to the General Plan must be treated the same as a project, Brehmer said.

"The trial court said that the OPR guideline didn't mandate an EIR," Brehmer said. "The appeals court reversed that decision, ruling that the OPR guideline was law."

•

WHEN ASKED ABOUT the lawsuits, Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos declared, "My goodness." It was the first time he had heard that the city was going to file suit.

Ramos declined to comment on the litigation, except to say, "There is substantial evidence to show that, although the Master Plan is a project, it deserves a negative declaration."

The supervisors had stated that the Master Plan was so thorough in its review of the impacts of future development that it was "the same as an EIR."

Valerio Biondo, candidate for mayor, disqualified

By KEITH YATES

VALERIO BIONDO, the last-minute candidate for mayor, has been disqualified because his nomination petition was two signatures short of the number required.

Monterey County Election Department Assistant Registrar of Voters Ross Underwood said that Biondo submitted 25 signatures nominating him for mayor in the April 8 election. "Of the 25, only 18 are registered Carmel voters," Underwood said.

Twenty valid signatures are required for nomination.

Biondo said that he will try "to resuscitate two" of the seven disqualified signers of his petition.

Underwood said that if Biondo can "show that the election department has made an error," he will allow him to run.

"He (Biondo) has signatures from two persons that our records indicate are not registered voters, and others from persons who list addresses other than those our records show. If he can show that our records are wrong, and that the signers are properly registered, we will allow him into the race," Underwood said.

•

BIONDO SAID THAT he hopes to find the seven signers and prove to Underwood that their signatures are valid.

"I'm still in the race—don't count me out," Biondo said.

Biondo, 32, hopes to beat Howard Brunn, Barney Laiolo and Mike Brown, all of whom are contenders for the post now occupied by Gunnar Norberg.

He has declared himself "a candidate of joy" who seeks to "loosen up" the "much-too-stiff City Council."

Biondo, a naturalized United States citizen, was born in Genoa, Italy.

•

BIONDO SAID THAT HE wanted to get "retirees and old people of Carmel to share their experiences with the young, creating joy for both parties."

He said, "It's high time we declared a moratorium on greed in this lovely village.

"I can't understand why our town has an ordinance prohibiting live music. Are we running a mortuary here, or perhaps a museum?" he asked.

Biondo is a self-employed carpenter.

•

HE HAD STATED THAT he was "probably the most unlikely candidate for the position."

"I am not a shopkeeper, lawyer or professor emeritus, I own no real property, nor am I rich. But is common sense a credential, too? I am a common sense candidate — a candidate of joy," he said.

•

WHEN NOTIFIED THAT Biondo was disqualified from the race, Brunn said, "It's a shame because Valerio is a welcome, lighter voice. He told me that if he's elected he'd make me an honorary Italian. Maybe now he'll swing his votes my way!"

Brown told the Pine Cone that he was "sorry that it doesn't seem to be working out for Valerio. It must be a disappointment for him."

Laiolo quipped, "The more the merrier—and let the best man win."

The Village:

Former police employee wants pay for briefing time

By KEITH YATES

THE CITY COUNCIL HAS denied a $120,000 claim for back wages filed by a former Carmel Police Department employee.

Jorune Jonikas, a police department desk officer from July 1973 to January 1980, filed the claim seeking back compensation for the 15 minutes that she and 14 other officers were required to spend before their work days began.

Jonikas said that the 15-minutes were for "briefing time" and were required of the employees "over and above" the normal eight-hour workday.

The policy ended in December 1979, according to Jonikas.

Jonikas said that she will take the matter to court.

Patrick Piggott, Jonikas' attorney, said that the claim seeks payment for overtime, a time-and-a-half rate, for 15 minutes per work day for three years. He said that the statute of limitations restricts the claim to the last three years.

Piggott told the Pine Cone that the claim names as defendants the City of Carmel, Police Chief William Ellis and Police Captain Bob Fischer. It is filed on behalf of Jonikas and 14 "John Does."

"We expected the city to deny the claim—that's routine. Our next step is to file a class action suit," Piggott said.

City Administrator Doug Peterson and Ellis would not comment on the case. City Attorney George Brehmer said only that the city routinely denies all claims against it. The council denied the claim following an executive session at its meeting Monday night.

Piggott said that he has defended policemen and police officers' associations in the past.

He said that there is "a pretty darn good prospect of settling out of court.

"There have been two recent and local settlements of this sort, including the cities of Seaside and Gilroy. Both suits concerned officers' overtime, and both suits were settled favorably for the claimants," Piggott said.

•

SEASIDE CITY MANAGER Roger Kemp told the Pine Cone that last November the city settled a "briefing time" claim with the Seaside Police Officers' Association out of court for $30,000.

Seaside Police Chief Ben Cooper said that the city "should have gone to court" to contest the claim.

"The city could have won it in court," Cooper said. "I would advise the city of Carmel to go to the mat—the city can probably beat it."

GILROY POLICE Officers' Association President Greg Giusiana told the Pine Cone that the association's $100,000 claim for payment for "briefing time" is still pending.

"We are going through the city administrative grievance process," he said, "but we doubt that it will be sufficient. We will probably seek litigation."

Giusiana said that he is "confident" that the claim will be settled to the association's satisfaction.

•

THE CARMEL POLICE Officers' Association "has not discussed" whether it will support the Jonikas claim, according to association president Monique Moon.

"We haven't sat down to talk about it," Moon said.

She would not speculate on what action, if any, the association might take.

One Carmel police officer, who asked not to be identified, said that "the money (for briefing time) would be nice." But he did not want to "further divide the (police) department" by taking a side in the matter.

"Nothing I say can help at this point," he said. "It's a class action claim. If it's won, I'll get some money. I've been here a while."

The officer admitted that the issue is a controversial one at the department. "People (in the department) are taking sides," he said.

'Heartbreaking, but not surprising'

5,000 books discovered missing at library

"HEARTRBREAKING, BUT not surprising" is how librarian Joanlee Childers described the theft of books at the Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel.

Childers said that "although inventory is not yet completed, losses of the library's holdings are clear."

The staff is working on the first thorough inventory since the library was founded in 1927.

The library was closed for inventory from Jan. 24-Feb. 1, except from 4-6 p.m.

•

"WE HAVEN'T TALLIED it all up yet," Childers told the Pine Cone, but it looks like we've got about 5,000 non-fiction books 'missing in action.' " She said that a final count of missing books will not be ready until June. The figure of 5,000 missing books is "more of a hunch" than a hard number, she said.

Childers said that 5,000 missing books would cost "about $75,000" to replace. Average library replacement cost per book is about $15, Childers said.

She said that although this is the library's first thorough inventory, the files have been brought up to date from time to time. "The 5,000 or so books aren't missing against only a 1927 inventory list," Childers said. "We're not counting (in the 5,000 book estimate) the books that, for some time now, we've known to be missing."

"The 5,000 books represent about a 10 percent loss of our total non-fiction holdings of about 50,000 books," she said.

"If our losses are only 10 percent, I'll be pleased. National averages are much higher. Many larger libraries, especially college libraries, suffer 30 percent losses."

Childers paused. "I'm not pleased with any loss. It's heartbreaking, really."

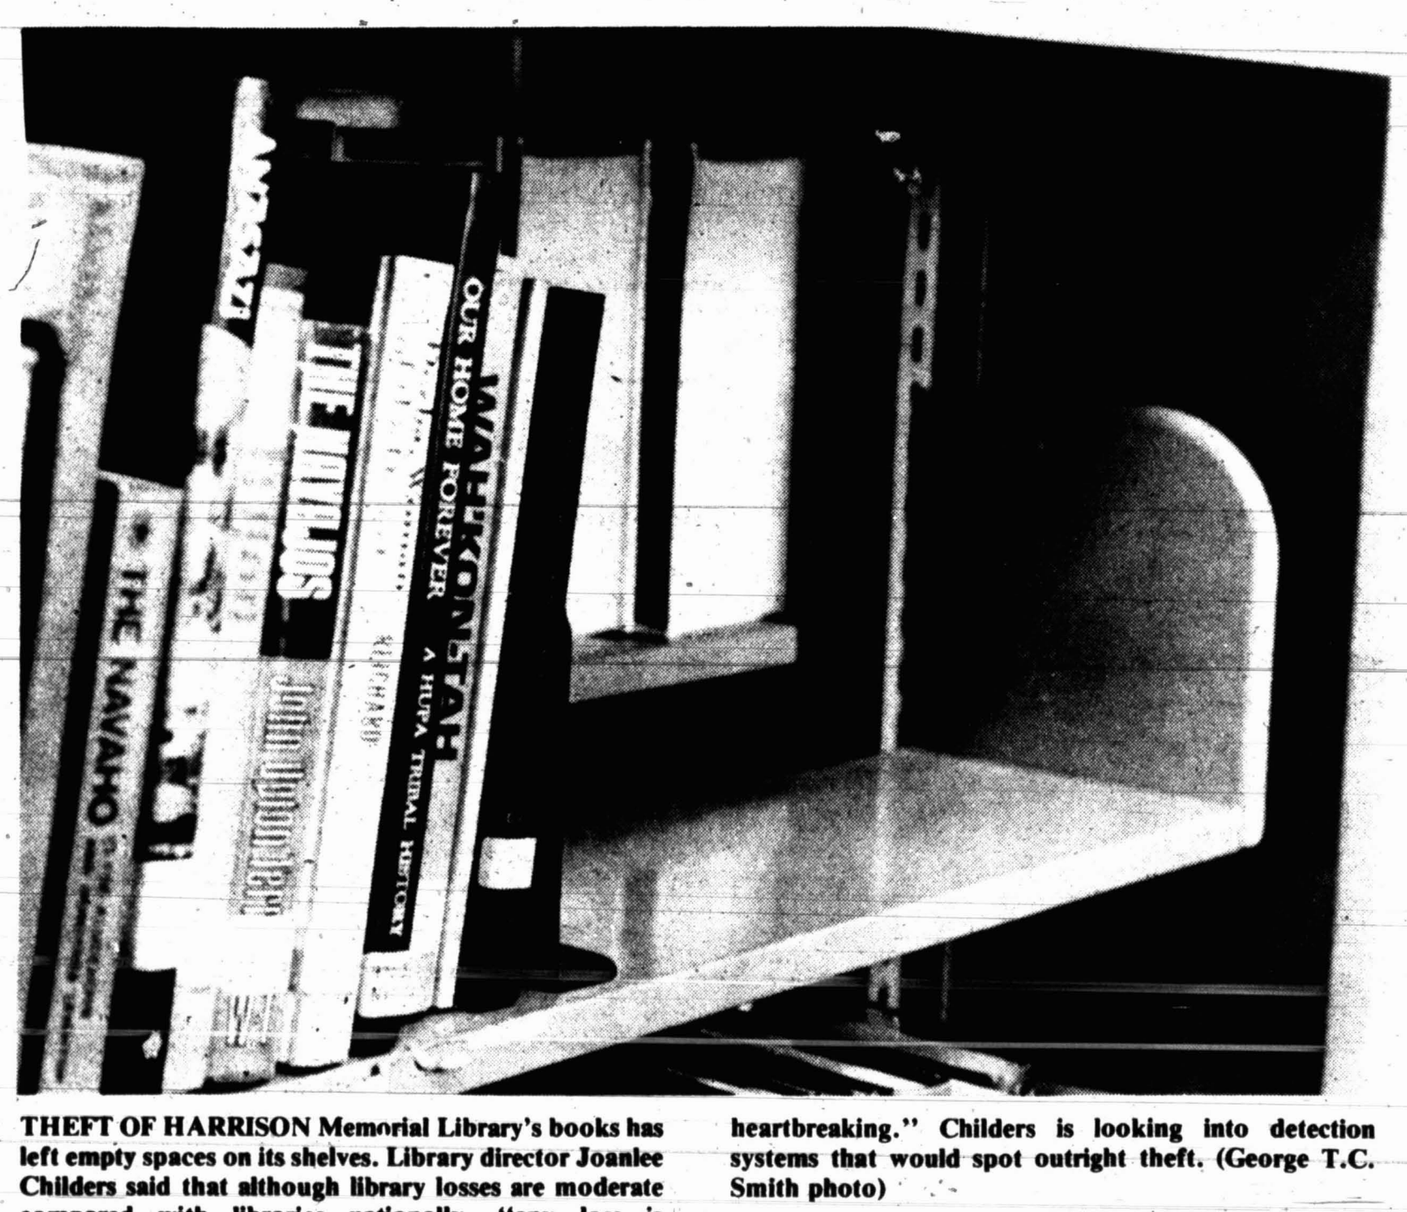
She said that thieves tend to prefer non-fiction works. "They go for books on art, religion, mysticism. Sometimes we'll get beautiful art books back with the color plates missing."

She said that the fact that many thieves have good taste "is no consolation."

•

CHILDERS SAID THAT she has looked into detection systems to spot outright theft from the library.

"There are now detection systems that would make sense for our library," she said.



THEFT OF HARRISON Memorial Library's books has left empty spaces on its shelves. Library director Joanlee Childers said that although library losses are moderate compared with libraries nationally, "any loss is heartbreaking." Childers is looking into detection systems that would spot outright theft. (George T.C. Smith photo)

The systems would require the insertion of a small strip or card into the spine of the books, and would cost $10,000-15,000, according to Childers.

"I will bring this up to the board of trustees," she said. The trustees are scheduled to meet Feb. 14, at 4 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall. The meeting is open to the public.

•

LIBRARY BOARD president Steve Crouch said that the board will study Childers' inventory report and recommendations carefully.

"She (Childers) brought up detection systems about three years ago," Crouch said, "but at that time we didn't know the extent of our losses. That's what this inventory is all about."

Childers said that the inventory won't be completed until around June. "We've still got fiction to do," she said, adding that it would be conducted "on the fly, during regular hours, so that we won't have to close again.

"Our holdings in fiction make up about a third of our inventory," she said, "and they're upstairs, out of the way of most of our patrons. It should go very smoothly."

Childers noted that the Jan. 24-Feb. 1 inventory "went beautifully. It was well-organized. It did wonders for staff morale, which was good to begin with."

Owner refuses to sell

City may condemn property for proposed library annex

HARRISON MEMORIAL Library is attempting to purchase two parcels of property on the west side of Lincoln north of Sixth for its proposed annex, according to library trustee Walter Gorey.

The owner of the properties, Jim Thompson, says he and his wife, Doris, do not want to sell. What worries — and angers — Thompson, however, is an ominous sign that the city may condemn his property if he remains adamant in his refusal to sell.

"The library board said last December that they'd give me $120,000 for one of my two parcels," Thompson told the Pine Cone. "I told them it wasn't for sale. I've got two houses on that lot and two on the one next to it. They provide low-income housing for six residents. Why displace those people?"

"Then, on Monday, Feb. 4, (City Attorney George) Brehmer called me and asked if my properties were for sale," Thompson said, "and I said, 'No.' Later that night (at the executive session of the City Council meeting) Brehmer was instructed to draw up condemnation procedures.

"I feel like they're sneaking around. Obviously the condemnation is about my property," Thompson said.

•

THOMPSON, A SAN Francisco attorney, was raised in Carmel. "I don't like to see them go big-time in Carmel," he said. "It's not in the spirit of the city."

Thompson said that the properties "represent a negative cash flow" for him. He rents them for $195-$295 per month. "I advertised one at $195 (per month) and got 35 calls the first day," he said.

He noted that the Local Coastal Plan calls for more low-income housing in Carmel.

"This is needed low-income housing," he said. "The library can move elsewhere—say to Sunset Center. Why put these people out in the street?"

•

LIBRARY TRUSTEES AND the city staff have been tight-lipped about the "negotiations."

"We're in mid-stream," said Gorey. "It's delicate right now. I can't say anything more."

City Administrator Doug Peterson would not comment on the relationship between the council's calling for condemnation guidelines and the library's annex plans.

•

AN AD HOC committee recommended in November that an annex be constructed to relieve the crowded condition at the library.

The annex would be funded from the $500,000 library endowment fund.

A proposal to locate the children's library section at Sunset Center was opposed by 50 Carmelites who signed a petition against the plan. The board of trustees dropped the proposal in December.

The library board has not designated a site for the annex. But most of the trustees and the library staff have publicly stated that they favor the northwest corner of Lincoln and Sixth, diagonally across from the library, as the location for the annex. The city-owned parking lot at that corner would be used for the annex, as well as one or both of Thompson's adjacent parcels—if the library can obtain them.

Hearing Feb. 15 on findings of fact in Holt's lawsuit against CV Ranch

ATTORNEYS ARE scheduled to argue the findings of fact in Harry Holt's lawsuit against the Carmel Valley Ranch development on Friday, Feb. 15, at 9:30 in Monterey County Superior Court.

Superior Court Judge Nat Agliano will hear the arguments on the findings that he released in January on his decision to dismiss Holt's suit last December.

Attorney Richard Rosenthal, representing Holt, has filed a formal objection to the findings, charging that "Agliano's ruling was erroneous." Rosenthal is preparing an appeal on Agliano's decision.

Feb. 15 was reported to be the date that the First District Court of Appeals in San Francisco was to consider a request for a temporary restraining order to halt construction of the Carmel Valley Ranch.

The appeals court, however, returned Rosenthal's preliminary writ last week without a ruling.

According to Rosenthal, the court asked him to include a trial court judgment. He said that he has resubmitted his request for the temporary restraining order. He said on Feb. 6 that he expected the appeals court to rule within 10 to 20 days.

•

AGLIANO'S FINDINGS OF fact are important because Rosenthal must convince the appeals court that they are incorrect in order for the appeal to prevail.

The findings were prepared by Jose Ramos, deputy county counsel, and signed by Agliano as part of his official trial ruling.

Ramos explained that "The burden is on the appellant (Holt) to prove that the findings are incorrect." The appeal will be denied if the appellate court finds simply that there is "substantial evidence" to support the trial court decision.

•

THE FINDINGS OF fact are the same arguments that Ramos and the developer's attorney presented during the trial, attacking Holt's standing to sue and the time lapse between his suit and his alleged cause for the complaint.

Holt's lawsuit, filed last June alleged that the county's General Plan was inadequate in 1976 when the supervisors approved a Specific Plan for the development, the largest in the history of the Valley.

The suit sought to have the county rescind its approval of the Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan for 500 condominium units, a 100-unit hotel and a golf course. It also asked that the county withdraw its approval of the tentative subdivision map that was granted by the supervisors in March 1979 for construction of the first 140 condominiums.

•

AGLIANO BASED THE dismissal on only one argument. He ruled that a one-year extension granted to the county last October to update its General Plan had the effect of "pushing ahead the deadline."

The year extension granted by the state Office of Planning and Research (OPR) was intended by the state Legislature to make the county immune to lawsuits, Agliano ruled.

Rosenthal argued that the extension was not retroactive. He has charged that the attacks on Holt's standing are unfounded.

Holt waited to file the lawsuit, Rosenthal said, because the county led him to believe that approval of the Specific Plan did not guarantee approval for the development. The lawsuit was filed only after the supervisors approved the tentative subdivision map and use permit last March for the first 140 condominiums.

•

THE APPROVAL WAS illegal on several grounds, Rosenthal argued.

The developer failed to prove, as required by the original language of the Specific Plan, that an independent water source was available for the development.

Rosenthal said, "We're going after the tentative map and the use permit for the 140 condominiums. They were illegally approved. They can be rescinded, and the developer would have to reapply."

MUSIC TEACHERS PLEADED last week for the restoration of the music program at Middle School. Middle School cutbacks jeopardize music program at Carmel High School

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE MUSIC PROGRAM at Carmel High School is in jeopardy because of the cutbacks at Middle School, the Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District was warned at its special meeting Feb. 5.

District music director Henry Avila issued the warning and told trustees that the hiring of one music teacher would nearly restore the music program at Middle School.

The program was cut back severely last year because of major budget reductions that resulted in the loss of two full-time music teachers.

Avila told the school board that the music program at Middle School "is spread too thin."

"We're not getting the number of students and the music program that we need," he said, adding that music is one of the most important student disciplines in the district.

•

THE MUSIC PROGRAM at Middle School is the sole "feeder" for music courses at the high school, Avila said.

"If it stays this way at Middle School, in a few years we'll see that we don't have enough students for a performing group at the high school," he warned.

Avila presented a written report calling for the district to hire a full or part-time choral instructor to promote all phases of the music program.

He also requested that bus transportation be provided for the high school performing groups.

•

WITHOUT AN ADDITIONAL teacher, Avila's report declares, the district would suffer the following:

- Classroom music would be curtailed or eliminated in kindergarten through third grade in three of the elementary schools.
- Evening productions and presentations would be limited.
- The extra-curricular choral ensembles and rehearsals at the high school would be terminated.
- Elementary schools would be limited to daytime music programs.
- Total enrollment at Middle School would decline due to music classes meeting during "O" period (8 to 9 a.m.).
- Beginning band at the Middle School would be terminated; the piano class would not be offered.

•

BEGINNING BAND WAS curtailed and the general music program eliminated at Middle School last year following the resignation of Tina Paradiso and the layoff of Joe Nokes.

The chorus class was rescheduled from the regular school day into "O" period.

Music teacher Bill Purdy told the trustees that because of the time change, enrollment in chorus dropped from 60 students to less than 12.

"Unless chorus is offered during the regular school day, we're not going to have kids sign up," Purdy said.

Music teacher Sharon Jones explained that she teaches 485 students per week. "I don't have any more time at all," she told the trustees.

•

PURDY AND JONES absorbed some of the program that was taught by Nokes and Paradiso.

They both teach "O" period classes at Middle School, then travel to the elementary schools to instruct chorus, instrumental and choral classes.

The teachers told the trustees that the music program in the elementary schools and Middle School is in desperate need of another teacher if they are going to instruct the students effectively.

•

THE TRUSTEES LAMENTED the cuts in music courses, but stopped short of guaranteeing that a teacher will be hired or the Middle School program will be restored. They suggested several alternatives.

Trustee Frances Gaver, who called music "one of the keys to our culture," said that private music organizations have offered to help.

"Music workshops by private organizations are one solution," Gaver said.

"Unless we have a big body of children interested in music at an early age, by the upper levels they'll be disappearing," she said.

Private organizations will welcome suggestions from the teachers on how their efforts might "dovetail," Gaver said.

•

TRUSTEE DOYLE CLAYTON asked the teachers what effect it would have if the six-period day is restored at Middle School next year. The trustees have declared their intent to restore six periods; Middle School is currently on a five-period schedule.

"Is 'O' period a good period for teaching music?" Clayton asked.

Jones replied that "O" period, which starts at 8 a.m., is not the best time because students consider 9 a.m. as the start of the school day.

Avila said, "You either have to return music to the regular periods or make 8 a.m. the official start of the school day."

•

SUPERINTENDENT DR. Carl Wilsey asked what effect it would have if "we're locked into the same staffing next year?"

Jones replied that the program would require help from parents at the elementary grade levels. Otherwise, music in the kindergarten through third grades would be eliminated, she said.

"I don't have any more time," she said, adding that despite several requests there are no parent volunteers from Carmel Valley.

Wilsey noted that the district has "some hope of getting some help for music" from Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS). The district has submitted a list of priority needs to FOCUS, a non-profit community group that was formed to raise money for the schools.

Board President Ken White said that he hoped it would be possible to restore the music program. "I have two children at Middle School who couldn't take music this year," he said.

•

AVILA EXPLAINED IN an interview after the meeting how the program could be restored with one additional teacher.

He said that Paradiso, who had taught in the district for five years, resigned instead of accepting cuts in her teaching schedule. She had taught choir, sixth grade band and two general music classes at Middle School.

Nokes, who was given notice as a second-year teacher, had taught elementary classroom music at Tularcitos and Carmelo, and beginning band at Middle School.

Avila absorbed Paradiso's choir and general music courses, and Nokes' beginning band. But he had to drop his stage band at the high school, the jazz bands at the high school and Middle School and a guitar class at the high school.

Jones was assigned the sixth grade band during "O" period, and Purdy the chorus, also during "O" period. The two teachers also assumed Nokes' elementary school schedule.

The further result of the schedule shuffling, Avila said, is the drop in enrollment in chorus and "a beginning band at Middle School that for all intents and purposes does not exist."

•

"THE PARENTS CLUB at Middle School offered to pay for a part-time teacher for beginning band," Avila said. "But the teachers objeced to the precedent of hiring a part-time teacher.

"If a full-time teacher took choir at the high school," Avila explained, "I could take beginning band at Middle School." The additional teacher could also fill in throughout the district in the elementary schools and performing classes.

"It's almost wishful thinking," Avila intoned. "But with one more teacher we could restore much of the program."

A full-time music teacher would cost the district $17,000 to $18,000 per year, according to Wilsey.

MINSTREL JOHNNY Bushell plays piano on the back of his van on Ocean Avenue. A crowd of people gathered to listen, and Bushell played boogie-woogie until the police arrived. Bushell has traveled across country, playing in more than 50 cities, including Washington, D.C., Boston and Nashville. (Steve Hellman photo)

Minstrel brings music to streets of Carmel--for 10 minutes

By STEVE HELLMAN

A MINSTREL PARKED his big green and white van in front of Dick Bruhn's clothing store on Ocean Avenue. He rolled his piano out to the tailgate and started playing lively boogie-woogie, '50s rock 'n' roll and ragtime.

Johnny Bushell had come across the United States, playing his piano on the streets of cities he visited.

The jovial, mustachioed minstrel was going to play in Carmel until—like everywhere else—a local lawman told him "to pack it up."

Tourists and residents crowded around the van, smiling and clapping.

•

BUSHELL WORE TENNIS shoes, a white shirt with stretch bands on the arms, and a vest. A bow tie smartly rounded out his piano-man attire.

Bushell didn't miss a beat as a green police car rolled up. A green-uniformed Carmel policeman approached Bushell and politely asked him if he had a city license.

"No, officer, I don't," Bushell replied over his shoulder, continuing to play his piano.

"You'll have to pack it up," the officer said.

Bushell finished the tune, pushed his Krakauer console piano into the van and agreed to an interview.

•

"YOU'RE LIVING PROOF that America's traveling minstrel tradition hasn't died," I said as Bushell led me into the van.

"When you believe in it," he chuckled, "you go for it."

Bushell has played piano for 21 of his 27 years. He played professionally for seven years, and taught music to youngsters for two years in San Francisco, his hometown, before hitting the road for Boston where he earned a master's degree in education at Boston University.

•

DID IT BOTHER him that he played only 10 minutes in Carmel before the police dropped the curtain on his act?

"Ten minutes is a lot less than the six hours I played in San Francisco, but at least I wasn't thrown in jail," he said.

He counted the money from a glass bowl he had set out for donations. The take was $10.

"In Gatlinburg, Tenn.," he said, "I was hassled, threatened by the cops and thrown in jail."

Bushell also played in front of Tiffany's in Boston, in front of the White House in Washington, D.C., and in front of the Grand Old Opry in Nashville, Tenn.

He spent one day on a Hopi Indian reservation in Arizona "playing for a group of the most beautiful brown-eyed children that you have ever seen."

•

BUSHELL TRAVELS, EATS and sleeps on about $200 per month. His large van is outfitted with a solar-heated shower, a sink, bed and the $900 Krakauer piano. He paid $4,500 for the four-year-old van and did the interior work himself.

"Financially, I'm not a success. But I've been wining and dining and having the time of my life. I've gained a whole street experience," he said seriously.

What has he discovered during his travels?

"People are still friendly as hell," Bushell said. He added that the situation in Iran and Afghanistan is on everyone's mind.

•

WHAT DID HE SEE of the countryside?

"I saw a lot of land being ripped up," he said.

Bushell, who said that he has a complete repertoire and show for elementary school children, promised that he will return to Carmel in September.

"I just had to come to Carmel on my way to L.A.," he said.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Real love is 'tough love'

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

The Feb. 5 invocation delivered at the Salvation Army Dinner

In the gospel of St. Matthew we read these words of our Blessed Lord, "Whatsoever ye do to one of these the lease of my brethren that ye do unto me."

For over 100 years the Salvation Army has been putting these words into action. When I was hungry you gave me to eat; when I was thirsty you gave me to drink; when I was weary you helped me find rest; when I was anxious you calmed all my fears. In a strange country you made me at home; seeking employment you found me a job; hurt in a battle you bound up my wounds; searching for kindness you held out your hand; when I was angered you bothered to smile; when I was restless you listened and cared; when I was laughed at you stood by my side; when I was in prison you came to see me; when I was happy you shared in my joy.

O Lord, may the next 100 years be as fruitful as the last. March on Christian soldiers, your flags unfurled please the Lord and they renew my faith as well.

•

The Feb. 6 invocation delibered to the Carmel Rotary Club

Paul of Tarsus told us how to help our neighbor but he warned that if we gave everything we have to feed the poor and have not given love we gain nothing.

God's greatest gift to men, in time and eternity is love, but it is not mushy nor soft nor stupid. Real love has to be "tough love."

When spanking Johnny we say this hurts me more than it does you and we mean it. We try to motivate Johnny's choice. We try to induce him to make a commitment but we still respect his choice to make the wrong decision within limits.

We must love a person a great deal to direct, rebuke and tell him the truth. When we level with a person and discipline them we practice tough love even when it causes pain to us and to others. Spanking can literally make a child smart.

O Lord, help us to love our family and friends enough to say sweetly and firmly when necessary, "Hell no."

Flood control officials 'very concerned'

Does Odello dike threaten developments n

You have the right to protect your land.
—U.S. Army Corps Engineer

By STEVE HELLMAN

CAN THE ODELLO family raise the Carmel River levee on their land without endangering developments on the other side of the river?

The answer to this question will be critical to any future development of the Odello land located east of Highway 1 and directly south of the Carmel River.

The Odello family wants to construct 97 condominiumns, a 200-room hotel and a farmers market. Their 134 acres of agricultural land is presently protected by a dike, although the Environmental Impact Report for their proposed development calls for a larger dike.

The property lies within the 100-year flood plain. Because the hotel would be located next to the Carmel River, the new dike would have to protect against at least a 100-year flood, according to EIR.

On the north side of the river is Carmel Center, Safeway market and a condominium complex—all protected by a single dike engineered to withstand a 100-year flood.

•

FEDERAL AND LOCAL flood control officials are "very concerned" that a new dike on the Odello land could force floodwaters over the dike on the north side, flooding the shopping center and existing residences.

As one official put it: "It's a critical problem."

He said that the Odellos may not be able to build on their land unless they construct new dikes on both sides of the river.

"We are very concerned with the Odello's proposed development," said Owen Stewart, assistant civil engineer for the Monterey County Flood Control District.

"Any proposed improvements on the south dike can not cause any change in water level or velocities that will endanger the north dike," Stewart said.

His office was given the authority to regulate development within flood plains by a federal program enacted in 1969.

•

THE FEDERAL INSURANCE Administration was created in 1969, and later renamed the office of Federal Insurance and Hazard Mitigation (FIHM), an arm of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Stewart explained.

FIHM stipulated that local governments control development in flood plains, and that property owners building within a flood plain must buy flood insurance.

Stewart said, "People were hit by floods and were getting federal low-interest loans and grants, then rebuilding in the flood plain.

"The burden of building in a flood plain is now on the home builder instead of the taxpayer," he said.

•

FIHM ALSO REQUIRES THAT a flood insurance and hazard study be conducted, at federal expense, and that maps be prepared for a flood plain.

George Nolte and Associates of San Jose is currently preparing Monterey County's flood insurance study.

Stewart explained that the FIHM regulations are based on the 100-year as a minimum standard, but he added, "In instances where it is necessary, we can go beyond the federal standards."

Stewart said that his office could either limit development on the Odello land or require that the property owner pay for an additional engineering study for alternatives to a larger dike.

•

THE EIR FOR THE Odello project does not consider the impact of a dike on the existing development across the river, Stewart noted.

He said that the Odellos could be required to construct a dike to withstand what is termed a "Standard Project Flood." Much greater than a 100-year flood, the standard project flood is used by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in its study of flood control measures, Stewart said.

"For areas that are inhabited, the corps requires protections for the standard project flood," he said. "We're going with the corps' approach.

"If the Odellos develop their land, they will have to construct a dike for a standard project flood," Stewart said.

•

STEWART ADMITTED THAT a dike built to withstand a standard project flood would obviously exceed the existing dike on the north side of the river.

He said that the Odellos could be required to build new dikes on both sides of the river. But this would be a last resort, and could be ordered only after the Odellos had improved their dike and as a result floodwaters threatened the developments on the other side of the Carmel River.

The conflict will be clarified, he said, after George Nolte and Associates completes the flood insurance study and determines the condition of the two levees.

"We could find that both levees are inadequate. We might have to widen the river," Stewart said.

"The corps could step in," he added, "and require that standard project flood levees be constructed on both sides of the river."

•

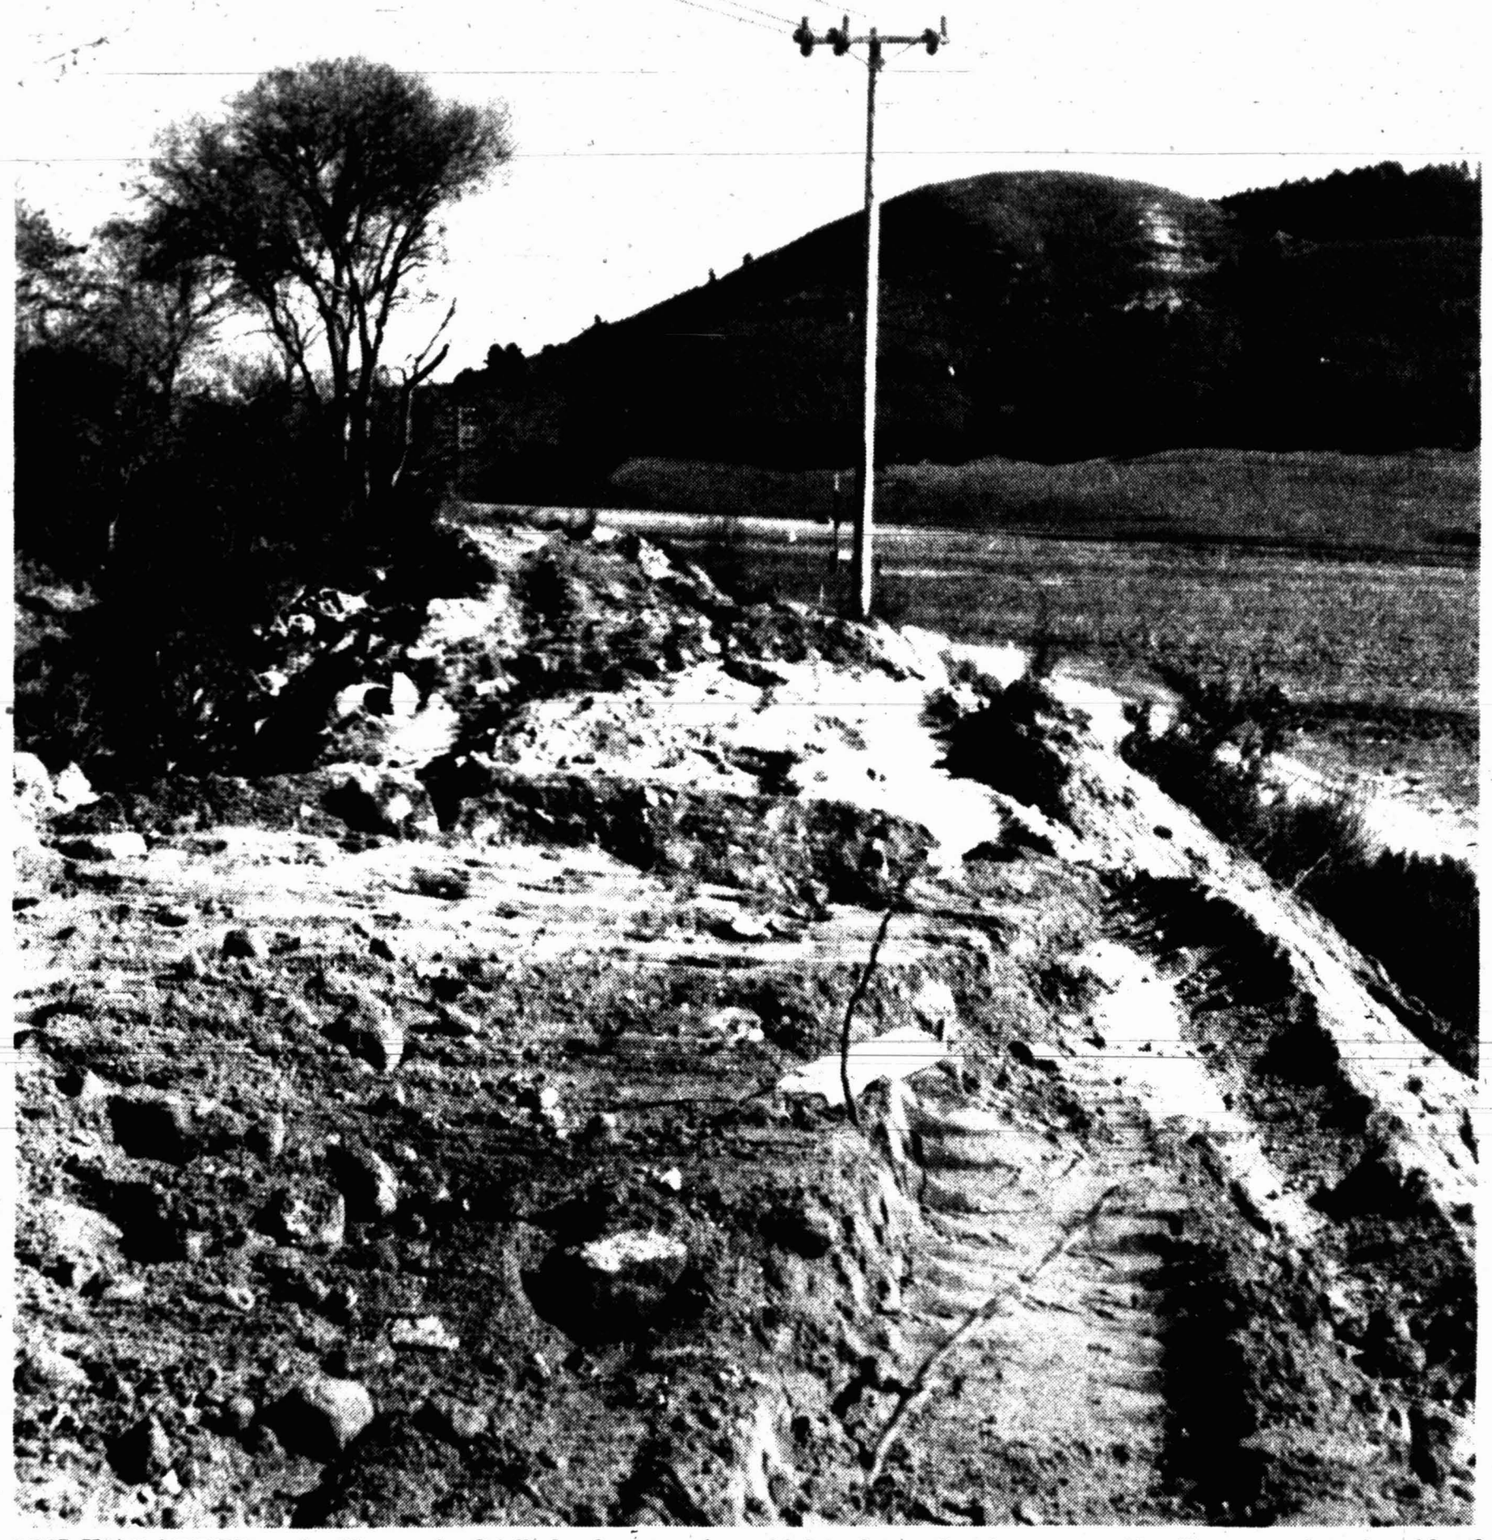
THE COUNTY CAN only require conditions on current and future developments, Stewart explained. It cannot require that a new levee be built on the north side of the river.

If the Army Corps of Engineers were to require a new levee on both sides, Stewart said that federal money might be available to finance the construction.

Otherwise, he said, an assessment district would be formed. Landowners on both sides of the river would pay fees to finance a new pair of levees.

•

DANA ROXON, CHIEF of the hydrology section for the corps' San Francisco district office, said that the dikes are a



SOIL WAS ADDED to the dike on the Odello land next to the Carmel River last week, while local and federal officials were analyzing the danger to the dike on the opposite bank. Flood control officials fear that if the Odello family raises its dike higher, future floodwaters would spill over on the other side of the river where there is a shopping center and residences. The Odello's farmland, south of the river and east of Highway 1, can be seen in the background. (George T.C. Smith photo) local issue.

"We are concerned only if the riverbed is touched," he said in a phone interview.

The corps is currently studying the feasibility of a new dam on the river in upper Carmel Valley. Roxon said that the study will be affected by any widening of the riverbed or work on the riverbanks.

•

ALTHOUGH CONSTRUCTION of dikes may not affect the river, Roxon acknowledged that the corps is concerned about the condition of the existing dikes.

"We want to know which side is higher, which is stronger, which would go first in a flood," he said.

Roxon said that George Nolte and Associates had thought that most flooding would occur on the Odello property.

"Nolte is now getting data to indicate that the north side might go first, and that there is a real danger to developments on that side," Roxon said.

•

THE COUNTY IS bound by FIHM regulations to not allow development in the flood plain, Roxon said. But the local government makes the final decision, he added.

"We have no authority to stop the raising of dikes or the development," Roxon said. "But on the other hand, the condominiums and the Safeway on the other side could be flooded."

•

"IT'S REALLY A tricky problem" said Jim Schaaf, Nolte's project manager for the flood insurance study.

"What we know at this point is that the dike on the north side is engineered, and the one on the south side is not,"

'We have no authority to stop the raising of dikes or the development. But on the other hand, the condominiums and the Safeway on the other side could be flooded.' — Dana Roxon, chief of the hydrology section for the San Francisco district office of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Schaaf said. "We don't know who put in the dike on the south side."

Schaaf said that the study, to be completed this summer, will consider the physical features of the river, nearby bridges and the levees.

"The purpose is to determine which areas are subject to flooding, and which areas require flood insurance," Schaaf said.

The study will also provide information for the county to develop flood plain management, he said.

"It is an existing condition study, not a study of what will result if a new dike is built," Schaaf said.

"If Odello rebuilds the south levee, we'll have to throw our study out the window," he said. "It then becomes a matter of who can build their side up the highest and the fastest."

Concerns about new Odello levee may be for naught

CONCERNS ABOUT levee safety for the Odello land may be for naught.

There is a possibility that the Odello family may abandon its development plans.

The Carmel Sanitary District has renewed its long-standing interest in buying the Odellos' 134 acres to use for a wastewater reservoir.

District Manager Michael Zambory said last week that the district may need the reservoir as part of its $13.7 million wastewater reclamation program.

He said that the district has not made a direct offer to the Odello family, but is working with the Big Sur Land Trust to acquire the land for a reservoir.

•

BRUNO ODELLO SAID that he had not received a formal offer from anyone, but "the door is always open to them (the sanitary district) if the price is right."

The sanitary district negotiated with Odello in the past, but an agreement was never reached.

Zambory said, "We cannot make a direct offer to the Odellos, but the Big Sur Land Trust is interested in our plans for the reservoir."

He explained that the district cannot include the reservoir in its reclamation project until it receives state approval. He expected the state Water Resources Control Board to rule in late February or early March on the reservoir.

•

ZAD LEAVY, ATTORNEY for the Big Sur Land Trust, said that he was exploring opportunities to purchase the Odello land.

He said that a multi-agency purchase may be put together to acquire the land for the sanitary district reservoir.

The city of Carmel, Monterey County, the state Department of Parks and Recreation, the Coastal Conservancy and other agencies will be contacted, Leavy said.

•

THE DEAL IS possible, he said, if the agencies can agree on a single use for the land. He said that the idea of the reservoir was suitable because it could also serve as a marine life refuge.

"It takes a catalyst in a deal of this sort," Leavy said.

He explained that the Big Sur Land Trust could serve as the lead agency.

Leavy said that the trust is currently raising money for an appraisal of the land.

Rodda's car fastest in Pinewood Derby

Jason Rodda won the trophy for the fastest car in the annual Pinewood Derby of Cub Scout Pact 127, conducted Jan. 30 at Tularcitos School.

Trails Hale placed seconds, Derek Wade third and Leif Meneke fourth.

Darin Nicholson won the bronze medal for design and Jason Aliotti in craftsmanship.

Honorable mentions included Joey Suwada, Christian Nagai, Jason Watts and Chris Nolte.

Judges for the derby were members of the Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club, which sponsors the local pack. Officiating were Dick Hindman, Randy Randazzo, Gary Tate and Raz Belleci.

Major 'housecleaning' under way

37 high school courses dropped

THE COURSE OF STUDY for the 1980 school year at Carmel High School is undergoing a major "housecleaning."

A review of the course offerings has been completed by high school principal Dan Stevenson, the school site council and a special committee of parents, teachers and students.

They recommend that 37 courses be deleted, eight added and four revised.

The Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District was scheduled to vote on the recommendations at a special Feb. 13 meeting.

•

THE RECOMMENDATIONS also call for a curriculum of 140 courses in the spring and fall.

It includes 18 courses in English; 12 in foreign langauges; 21 in career and occupational education; 13 in history and social sciences; 13 in mathematics; 12 in performing and productive arts; 11 in science; 22 physical education courses in the fall and 25 in the spring and two driver education classes.

Electives comprise the majority of the 37 courses that are marked for deletion, Stevenson said. He said that most of them were cut from the high school curriculum last year.

•

THE HIGH SCHOOL faculty was cut back from 51 to 43 teachers last spring, Stevenson noted. Many classes that appear in the course of study were not offered this year because of teacher layoffs.

The cuts in staff and program were forced by more than $300,000 in budget reductions.

Stevenson said, "A few more classes will have to be cut this year because certain teachers are no longer with us, or we simply can't afford them (the classes).

"We also have to do some housekeeping," he added, "to delete officially some courses that were cut two and three years ago."

A small number of courses are also being combined.

•

COURSES THAT WERE cut and will not be restored include the physical education classes of snorkeling, synchronized swimming, body mechanics, bowling, golf, pre-professional physical education and fishing.

Performing and productive arts classes that will not be restored include film production, beginning guitar and solo ensemble.

Stevenson said that the yearbook and school newspaper courses will be deleted officially, but will continue on a volunteer basis with a faculty adviser.

Global experience, anthropology, language and culture and personal psychology are social science electives that were also cut last year and marked for deletion. Leadership will be deleted from the official course of study, but retained on a volunteer basis during lunchtime, Stevenson said.

•

WRITERS WORKSHOP (advanced creative writing) will be combined with regular creative writing. English as a second language, which is specially funded, will be cut because of budget reductions.

English and American poetry, film survey and English Individualized 1 and 2 are electives that were cut last year and will not be restored.

Consumer lifestyles and fire science were eliminated two years ago, and will be deleted. "Simple housekeeping," Stevenson said.

Last year's staff reductions will cause the elimination of power mechanics and industrial crafts/woods.

Because of the loss of a specific math teacher, the foundations of math (advanced geometry) and Algebra 2 (Ascent of Man) will be deleted, Stevenson said.

INTRODUCTION TO Agriculture and Agriculture 2 will be shifted into the Regional Occupational Program (ROP).

Staff reductions also led to the cut of exploratory work experience, general work experience and vocational work experience—courses that were designed to give students credit for their off-campus jobs. Stevenson said that these courses will be absorbed into ROP.

Four new courses will be added to ROP: accounting in small business; commercial maintenance and repair; fashion and design; small business operations.

OTHER COURSES TO be added to the course of study include: advanced German and advanced German conversation, geography and world affairs, and theater arts 1 and 2.

Stevenson said that the German courses are included in order to offer four years of study in all of the three language areas: French, Spanish and German. Latin 1 will be deleted because of a lack of enrollment, he said.

Geography and world affairs will replace world cultures as a social science elective.

Trustees to meet at Cooper School

The Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District will conduct a special meeting at Captain Cooper Elementary School in Big Sur on Tuesday, Feb. 19.

Parents requested the meeting to present a proposal for reinstatement of a full-time teaching position.

Superintendent Dr. Carl Wilsey explained that there were three full-time teaching positions at Captain Cooper, but one position was cut back two periods last year.

Declining enrollment prompted the cut, he said. The enrollment has dropped by nine in the past two years to 56 students this year.

The trustees will have dinner with parents, then meet at 7:30 p.m.

Cypress swimmers qualify for AAU regional event

The Cypress Swim Club swam away with silver medals in both the duet and team events at the Pacific AAU's Age Group Synchronized Swimming Championships in San Francisco on Feb. 2-3 to qualify for the 1980 AAU Region XIII Championships at Riverside on Feb. 15-17.

Kerry Wald came close to qualifying in the 17-18 solo event, winning third place in routine competition, but her fourth place finish in the figures competition held her in that slot. Only the top three winners in each age group in each event qualify for the prestigious regional championships.

Wald then paired with Susie McCleskey to win the routine portion of the 17-18 duet competition, but again their scoring in figures held them to second place and a silver medal finish behind the San Francisco Merionettes.

The six-girl Cypress team of Cindy Cornford, Brenda LaMica, Eunice LaMica, and Diana Marks, plus McCleskey and Wald, jumped from a fourth place overall figures ranking to win the silver medals in the 15-18 team finals. They scored seven points ahead of the San Francisco Merionettes in third, and three points behind the Walnut Creek Aquanuts who won the event.

Kassandra Gardner won a sixth place ribbon in the 10-and-under solos after a 16th place finish in figures.

Lori Wright, swimming solo for the very first time, came from 27th place to a 10th place finish in the 11-12 age group.

In the 13-14 solos, Brenda LaMica placed 13th and Cornford 14th. In the 15-16 solo event, McCleskey and Marks were both ribbon winners, placing sixth and seventh, respectively, while in the 15-16 duet competition, Cornford and Marks paired to win the sixth place ribbons.

Because of the size of the entry in this meet, which included 208 swimmers, the figures competition was held the previous weekend. Cypress placements in that event were as follows: 10-and-under: Kassandra Gardner, 16th; Mia Maxinoski, 41st; Jackie Maxner, 42nd and Heather Erwin, 46th. 11-12: Lori Wright, 27th; Gina LeGro, 61st, and Colleen Parry, 62nd. 13-14: Brenda LaMica, 19th and Cindy Cornford, 31st. 15-16: Susie McCleskey, 11th; Eunice LaMica, 14th and Diana Marks, 22nd. 17-18: Kerry Wald, 4th.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP Carmel High School girls' varsity field hockey team poses after its 4-2 win over North Salinas that clinched for CHS the title in the Mission Trail Athletic League and Cross League. Team members are (front row, left to right), coach Phyllis Crockett, Jill Piper, Mary Wahl, Linda Fleager, Tricia Martin, LeeAnn Steinmetz, Jeannine Harbor; (back row) Dorie Brown, Theresa Ostrander, Donna Womble, Vonnie Hildebrand, Jelinda Henstrand and Cary Ostrander. By MARK SANFORD

THE GIRLS' VARSITY field hockey team won the Mission Trail Athletic League and Cross League championship by defeating North Salinas 4-2.

Senior Therese Ostrander, a four-year veteran, lead the team with three goals.

Linda Fleager added the other goal and had an assist.

LeeAnn Steinmetz, also a senior, had three assists against North Salinas.

The girls had a 4-1-1 record in the MTAL and a 9-1-2 overall record.

Ostrander set a school record of 42 goals over four years with 16 of them coming this season.

•

THE JUNIOR VARSITY girls' field hockey team wrapped up its season with a tie against North Salinas, 3-3.

Amy Buckner scored two goals and Shawn Roth one with an assist to lead Carmel. Susan Buckner and Brenda LaMica had one assist each.

•

THE GIRLS' BASKETBALL team remained undefeated in league play, raising its record to 8-0 by crushing Hollister 59-32.

Sophomore Aileen Kelly played an outstanding game, scoring 18 points, to lead the Padres.

Guard Dana Hunter poured in 12 points and played good defense.

The girls have only to play Robert Louis Stevenson away on Feb. 15 and Pacific Grove at home on Feb. 16 before the post-season playoffs start.

The team will be looking for revenge against Notre Dame of Salinas, who gave Carmel its only loss earlier in the season.

•

THE BOYS' VARSITY basketball team lost its last two games, falling to a tough league-leading Hollister 80-58 and to Palma, 58-52, in a comeback that fell short.

Art Strum was one of the bright spots of the team against Hollister with 17 points. Mike Miller followed with nine.

Palma jumped out to a 32-22 halftime lead with Strum being Carmel's offense, pumping in more than half of Carmel's points.

But then the Padres rallied back in the fourth quarter and with 1:45 to go in the game, Strum made a shot to tie the score at 52.

As throughout the entire evening, every time the Padres were close, breaks and turnovers went against them, and that told the last minute of the game.

Strum led all scorers, with 27 points. Greg Raynes had 12.

The team plays its last two games of the season against Robert Louis Stevenson at home and away at Pacific Grove on Feb. 15 and 16, respectively. Both games are at 8 p.m.

Cut in contribution debated

Library, county try to resolve funding dispute

THE HARRISON MEMORIAL Library and the county "are back at the negotiating table" in an attempt to resolve their contract dispute.

"The library usually has a signed contract with the county for the coming fiscal year by the previous February, and money in hand in December at the latest," librarian Joanlee Childers said. "That makes us a year behind schedule."

The library board decided at its Jan. 10 meeting that unelss county funds of $162,720 are received by March 1, the library will suspend services to non-Carmel residents.

The county normally shares funding responsibility for library operations in accordance with the proportion of county (non-Carmel) users of the library's services.

The county share for fiscal year 1979-80 is $162,720, according to Childers.

The city's contribution for 1979-80 is $200,000, according to City Administrator Doug Peterson.

The library has had no trouble receiving its funds from the city, Childers said.

•

MONTEREY COUNTY Administrator Richard Andrews told the Pine Cone that the delay in funding was the library's fault.

"The (Harrison Memorial) library receives state money under the California Library Services Act for servicing patrons not residing in Carmel," Andrews said last month. He said that the county cannot pay the library "for services that are paid for by the state" because "it was not the intention of the act to provide double payment."

When Childers replied that the intention of the act was to provide supplemental, not replacement funds, Andrews revised his interpretation of the law, stating, "We will not argue the intent of the law, for it seems clear enough that the state funds are intended to supplement, not replace county funding.

"However," Andrews said, "the act does not necessarily prohibit" the county from reducing its contribution by the amount provided by the new state funds.

He said that the county "is simply not in a position" to award the library the full $162,720.

CHILDERS TOLD THE Pine Cone that she received a letter and personal visit from Monterey County Librarian Barbara Wynn. "We're back at the negotiating table," Childers said. "The county has sent us a contract. We're not necessarily pleased with every part of that contract, but at least it's a beginning."

Childers did not specify what amount the county is offering the library. "It's not what we were looking for ($162,720), but we're looking at it and making emendations here and there."

Andrews said that the proposed contract reduces the county contribution by the amount the state provides under the library services act.

"Barbara Wynn received a letter from the state, saying that under the law we can reduce our contribution by the amount contributed by the state, so I assume that our offer was $162,000 minus the $30,000-50,000 of state money," Andrews said.

"We will send the library the money just as soon as we receive a signed contract," Andrews said.

Childers said that the contract will be discussed at the library board of trustees meeting today (Feb. 14) at 4 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

No street lights for area where woman was mugged

DARKNESS WILL CONTINUE to stalk the area around the Cherry Foundation and the Golden Bough Cinema in Carmel.

The City Council decided last week to drop the suggestion to investigate the installation of street lights for non-residential uses in the residential district.

A 65-year-old Carmel woman was mugged near the Cherry Foundation at Guadalupe and Fourth on the evening of Dec. 20.

The victim had left her car and was walking toward the Cherry Foundation in the dark when a "possibly quite young male" assailant struck her to the ground and stole her purse, according to Police Chief Bill Ellis.

•

THE INCIDENT PROMPTED Councilman Helen Arnold to inquire last month about the desirability of street lighting in the area.

She recommended at the Feb. 4 council meeting, however, that the suggestion be dropped.

"I was told that street lighting does not always reduce the incidence of crime," Arnold told the Pine Cone. "In fact, it was suggested to me by (Carmel Public Works Superintendent) Bill Askew that lighting can increase the incidence of crime."

•

"THE INSTALLATION of lights at the Sunset Center parking lot did result temporarily in a higher incidence of crime there," City Administrator Doug Peterson said.

"It is known that there is no automatic relationship between lighting and crime," Peterson said. "The great enthusiasm for lighting as a crime deterrent waned a few years ago, after poor results in Washington, D.C. and a number of other cities."

•

ELLIS SAID THAT "lighting won't increase or decrease crime in the residential district."

He said that residents "are free to light their homes and grounds," but must not allow the light to distract motorists on public streets.

Both the Cherry Foundation and the Golden Bough Cinema at Monte Verde and Eighth are non-residential uses in residential areas. Peterson and Ellis said that city policy has been to discourage lighting in the residential district.

More reflections on the 70s

1976: IT WAS A VERY good year, for brown-haired girls in very short skirts . . . why is it I get mushy when I hear Old Blue Eyes sing that song, or Walter Huston sing September Song? Perhaps because I know the truths therein?

•

IF THE CITY Council members really did spend $20 for handbooks designed to teach them how to shorten their meetings, either they don't read or they got rooked.

•

1977: LOST AN OLD friend this year. But I wonder if we ever really lose someone. He's no longer physically sitting next to me at Rinky Dink, or playing chess, or scoffing at the quality of my tomatoes, or laughing at the antics of our accumulated children—yet he is. Perhaps because he once was, he always will be. Memories can be a form of life also.

•

1978: OLD CARMEL, New Camrel, Carmel Now, Carmel Tomorrow! How about non-faction, non-fighting, Just Carmel?

It worries and angers me—this division of our community. It can only lead to trouble. Extremes always do.

•

THE TROUBLE WITH our family is that we do too many things. Too full of projects. This really is a great way to be—except when people come to visit. Their houses are in good order (their lives also, I suppose), and while I know they love us anyway, there is always that quizzical look in their eyes, wondering just how we stand it. Either that or they never had kids.

We have had several classic confrontations. One I remember especially well was a living room scene which was walked in on with open mouth. One young man had his bare feet up in the air, being measured for socks (argyle) by the current young lady, whose needles and eight colors of yarn were being thoroughly tumbled about by the cat. Another young lady was practicing the clarinet while sitting under the hair dryer. The Missus was on the floor teaching poker and blackjack to the 7-year-old ("to assist with arithmetic"), and I was loudly searching through a huge heap of papers, books, etc. for a missing microscope slide.

Our visitor kept his cool, but I noted that he always called before coming over after that. Too bad, he missed a lot of good times.

•

FUNNY HOW POWER corrupts. "Give an inch and they'll take a mile." One year's "good guys" end up being black hatters after a stretch of time in public office.

•

1979: MAYBE MY "JUST Carmel" has a chance for the future. Rise up neighbor and show that "the people" are not going to be trod upon. Carmel will be governed by REPRESENTATIVES.

•

THE WINTERING OF the garden is now in full force. The die-backs have all died-back, the tubers and bulbs are pulled out for dividing, the leaves and twigs of winter's storms are being piled high, for sorting and carting. The pruning is done and dormant spraying finished, and the time now is fully occupied by pouring over the seed catalogues whose bright pages stir the imagination and make the muscles twitch in anticipation.

Enjoy, enjoy, it only lasts a few weeks.

•

THERE IS GREAT pleasure in seeing unity in this town again. Like New York City in a blizzard or a blackout, Carmel has rallied 'round the Collins disaster (unnatural kind) and all have shown the disaster-makers that this "Chappaquiddick" will haunt through April's election, and then some.

•

BACK TO NOW
OBSERVATIONS AT RANDOM:

WILLIAM FAULKNER once wrote one sentence that covered more than 12 pages (without double-checking, I think it was 20).

While I admired the technique, I didn't think much of his writing either.

•

WHEN A MAJORITY of the council constantly caucus before meetings to "get their act together"; when a councilman constantly violates the confidences of executive sessions, especially to media; when disdain for city employees extends to feudal attitudes, or night time examination of the city files, then I say, the time has come to get some human beings into office!

•

BOMBAST IS NOT a mandatory characteristic for a councilman. Sincerity is.

•

I CAN IMAGINE few moments when Carmelites would find it necessary to express their joy in something by dancing in the streets.

There would be a segment of people who would do so on the first day "all the tourists went home." However, these very people would be the leaders of the protest march when the resulting property tax bills were received.

•

WAS ANGERED AND annoyed this week when friends of mine, whose business is on Fifth Avenue, ran afoul of the "City." Seems they have been working hard to beautify their "piece of Carmel," and have gardened and planted numbers of expensive flowers and shrubs outside their shop. In front of them is a "No Parking at Any Time" sign. Up the dusty dirt road from them are two new "Park Parallel" signs where there has never been any parking designation. In front of their store, just next to the "No Park" is one other area of dirt with just enough room for one car to squeeze in.

Observation showed that cars were being ticketed that parked there, so our friends logically concluded that this area of dirt could be beautiful as well, and proceeded to do so, with rocks, flowers and junipers.

This apparently upset someone whose employees were being denied this all-day spot to park (that's all that parked there—employees), and the Department of Public Works descended and demanded that all be returned to dirt and dust.

It was. And of the total of six parking spaces on that entire block, one is 20 minutes, two one hour (across the street and duly marked) and now three are all-day and used by employees, not residents, for one or two hours.

Too bad. The residents of that area had expressed their enjoyment of the gardens as they walked past each day, but now there is no benefit from that dust bowl to Carmelites, by either use or beauty.

Council pushes for change in annexation election law

THE CITY OF Carmel is calling for changes in the state law regulating annexation elections.

The City Council instructed City Administrator Doug Peterson Monday night to ask Assemblyman Henry Mello and State Senator Robert Nimmo to introduce legislation that would allow residents of smaller cities like Carmel to vote on annexation issues.

Carmelites could not vote last November on the measure to annex Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods to the city of Carmel.

•

THE CURRENT LAW provides that city residents can vote only if:

• The total assessed value of land within the proposed annexation territory equals one-half or more of the total assessed value of land in the city, according to the last equalized assessment roll.

• Or the number of registered voters residing in the territory equals one-half or more of the number of registered voters within the city, as shown on the county register of voters.

•

THE CITY COUNCIL wants the state Legislature to add another condition that would allow city residents to vote if the population is less than 10,000 and either:

• The number of registered voters within the affected territory equals 10 percent or more of the number of registered voters residing within the city.

• Or the total assessed value of land within the affected territory equals 10 percent or more of the total assessed value of land within the affected city.

Adoption of the proposed change would allow Carmel residents to vote in any future annexation proposals.

•

THE COUNCIL ACTION passed on a 4-1 vote with Mayor Gunnar Norberg dissenting.

"I think we're swimming upstream," Norberg said, referring to what he called the state Legislature's "disinclination" to lower the standards for voting on annexation measures.

Councilman Mike Brown replied, "I think we should swim upstream into some fresh, new waters."

Brown has pressed for reform in the state government code since the Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods annexation election last November.

Annexation of the two areas was rejected by voters 555-453 on Nov. 6.

Carmel hires new city clerk

CARMEL HAS A new city clerk. Patricia J. Dantes began her new duties Feb. 13. She succeeds Patricia O'Hearn, who left Jan. 4 to become Monterey city clerk.

City Administrator Doug Peterson said that Dantes was selected from a group of 15 applicants. "She was selected," he said, "because of prior governmental experience. I'm very pleased to have her on board."

Dantes, 36, was administrative assistant at the Monterey Peninsula Refuse Disposal District from 1974-79. "They called me 'Queen of the Dump,' " she told the Pine Cone. "I was secretary to the board, headed the CETA program, and was involved in the auditing and finances of the district."

After leaving the disposal district in January 1979, Dantes sold commercial real estate for Century 21 in Carmel. Last August she moved to Lodi to accept a secretarial position with a Stockton law firm. She said that a friend called her about the city clerk position.

"I was planning to move back to Carmel soon," she said. "I missed it."

She lived in Carmel from 1974-79.

Dantes is single. She was born and raised in Concord, and attended Mount Diablo Junior College and San Francisco State University.

4 persons take out petitions to run for supervisor

Four persons have taken out petition papers for the Fifth District supervisorial race, according to Ross Underwood, assistant county registrar.

They are William Peters, member of the county Planning Commission; Neill Gardner, former publisher of the Pacific Grove Tribune; Florence Hunter, former administrative aide to Monterey County Supervisor Sam Farr; and Earl Thorp, a Monterey businessman.

The petition serves in lieu of the $386 filing fee, Underwood said. He said that 1,500 signatures are required for the candidate to file without paying the fee. If 1,500 signatures are not collected, each signature on the petition is applied against the fee on a pro rated basis.

The filing period for the race opened last Monday and closes March 7.

Incumbent Farr has declared that he will not seek re-election. He is running for the state Assembly seat of Henry Mello in the 28th district. Mello has decided to run for the state Senate.

Feb. 11 at 5 p.m. was the filing deadline for the Assembly seat.

The Fifth District covers the Monterey Peninsula, including the cities of Carmel and Pacific Grove, and the western part of Monterey. It also includes all of the coast from the Peninsula south to Andersons Landing about 15 miles below Big Sur. It extends east along the northern boundary of Carmel Valley, and includes all of the Valley up to Carmel Valley Village.

Farr has occupied the seat since June 1975 when he was appointed by Governor Jerry Brown. He succeeded Robert Bolman, who resigned in April 1975 for health reasons. Bolman was appointed in October 1974 by Governor Ronald Reagan to complete the term of Willard Branson, who resigned in September 1974 because of illness. Farr was elected to the post in June 1976.

CITY INSURED

Carmel now has public liability insurance. Lee Gottfried and George Wood, councilmen appointed to investigate the question of taking out a policy, acted yesterday morning in favor of a $100,000 policy for a period of three years. The cost will be roughly $3,000 and payments the first year approximately $1,032.

SINCLAIR LEWIS SPEAKS ON CARMEL

Carmel is no Gopher Prairie. Ocean Avenue is no Main Street. That should settle the matter. The village has Sinclair Lewis' word on it.

While trying his best to do nothing at all, Lewis had time Monday morning to discuss the civilized qualities of Carmel and the lamentable state of Pacific Grove—views, which coming from Sinclair Lewis, should satisfy the vanities of both towns.

"No, there isn't another town in the world that I know of like Carmel," he said. Carmel's character is something immensely worth preserving and fighting for, Lewis believes. "Carmel should never pave its streets. Why, damn it!" he exclaimed, "there are 3,000 miles of pavement right to the east. Why should Carmel go ahead and make itself like every other town in the country?"

Lewis drifted into Carmel 22 years ago, taking a shack near the Arts and Crafts theater with William Rose Benet. They wose what they pleased, did their own cooking and it was terrible, he said. Lewis related, "Once in a long time Bill would say, 'Well I suppose we'd better sweep off the bed again. I'm damned if I see how so much sand gets between the sheets.' "

The author of Babbitt, Main Street, Arrowsmith, Elmer Gantry and Dodsworth, doesn't worry about sand between the sheets now and is not looking for work. He said, "You couldn't get me to write an exclusive on the private life of God."

"NOT ON YOUR LIFE," CHIEF LEIDIG SAYS

Robert Leidig, chief of the Carmel Fire Department, positively will NOT be a candidate in the coming election for the Carmel City Council. "I have enough to do as it is without going in for that," he said with emphasis. "Nothing doing. The fire department and the Manzanita Club and a few other things are all I care to handle, thank you."

During the past week rumors to the effect that Leidig would run have been going the rounds.

PLAY HOUSE WILL BE REOPENED AS STUDIO

Carmel Playhouse, now undergoing extensive improvements, will be reopened next month as the Studio of the Golden Bough. The most important alterations are in the incline of the floor and the seating plan. The capacity of the house is being reduced to 300 with generous spacing between the seat rows.

APARTMENT HOUSE TO BE BUILT

M.J. Murphy Inc. is to start work soon on a two-story apartment house on the east side of Monte Verde between Ocean and Seventh. The owners are Mrs. M.L. Hamlin, Miss Alice Miller and Allen Knight. J. Francis Ward of San Francisco is the architect.

The building will be of concrete and stucco, will have 14 apartments, two stores on the ground floor and a central heating plant. It will be known as the Sun Dial Court Apartments.

PARKING DISTRICT PLAN ALL SHOT

The City Council was all set last night to pass a resolution of intention to form an $85,000 parking district with powers to purchase land for three parking lots, the property owners in the business zone to pay the bill over a period of 20 years, through a maximum tax of 25 cents a hundred.

City Attorney Tom Perry spent 20 minutes reading the resolution, 10 minutes for the whereases and 10 minutes for the therefore be it resolvedes, and was all through, breathless but triumphant.

City Clerk Peter Mawdsley stuck out his English underlip and announced that according to the resolution, the city was giving away its lot next to the City Hall in contributing it to the district for a parking lot. In years to come that property might become very valuable and it could never be used for anything but a parking lot.

Councilwoman Geraldine Smith agreed with Mawdsley that "we haven't any right to give away the people's property."

Perry wailed that he wouldn't touch that resolution for anything. The resolution had to be passed then or the printing schedule would be all shot. Besides, if the resolution was changed in any way, Perry would have to read it aloud to the council all over again, every word of it for 20 minutes.

The council decided the schedule should be moved up a week. Perry almost cried.

WOOD KILLS BOBCAT NEAR CHEW'S RIDGE

Tom Wood, hunting in the Chew's Ridge area Sunday, killed a bobcat with a bow and arrow.

His reputation as an archer and bow maker is well established among bow and arrow hunters. He was asked to go wild boar hunting in the Chew's Ridge area. Though there were many signs of boar, uranium hunters had driven the fierce Russian pigs into hiding. Wood thought the cat was ample compensation, since he was a big specimen and was brought down at long range.

Wood reports he found the National Forest in the Chew's Ridge area overrun with uranium prospectors, and a great many mining claims staked out.

CARMEL BUCKS STATE'S PROPOSAL

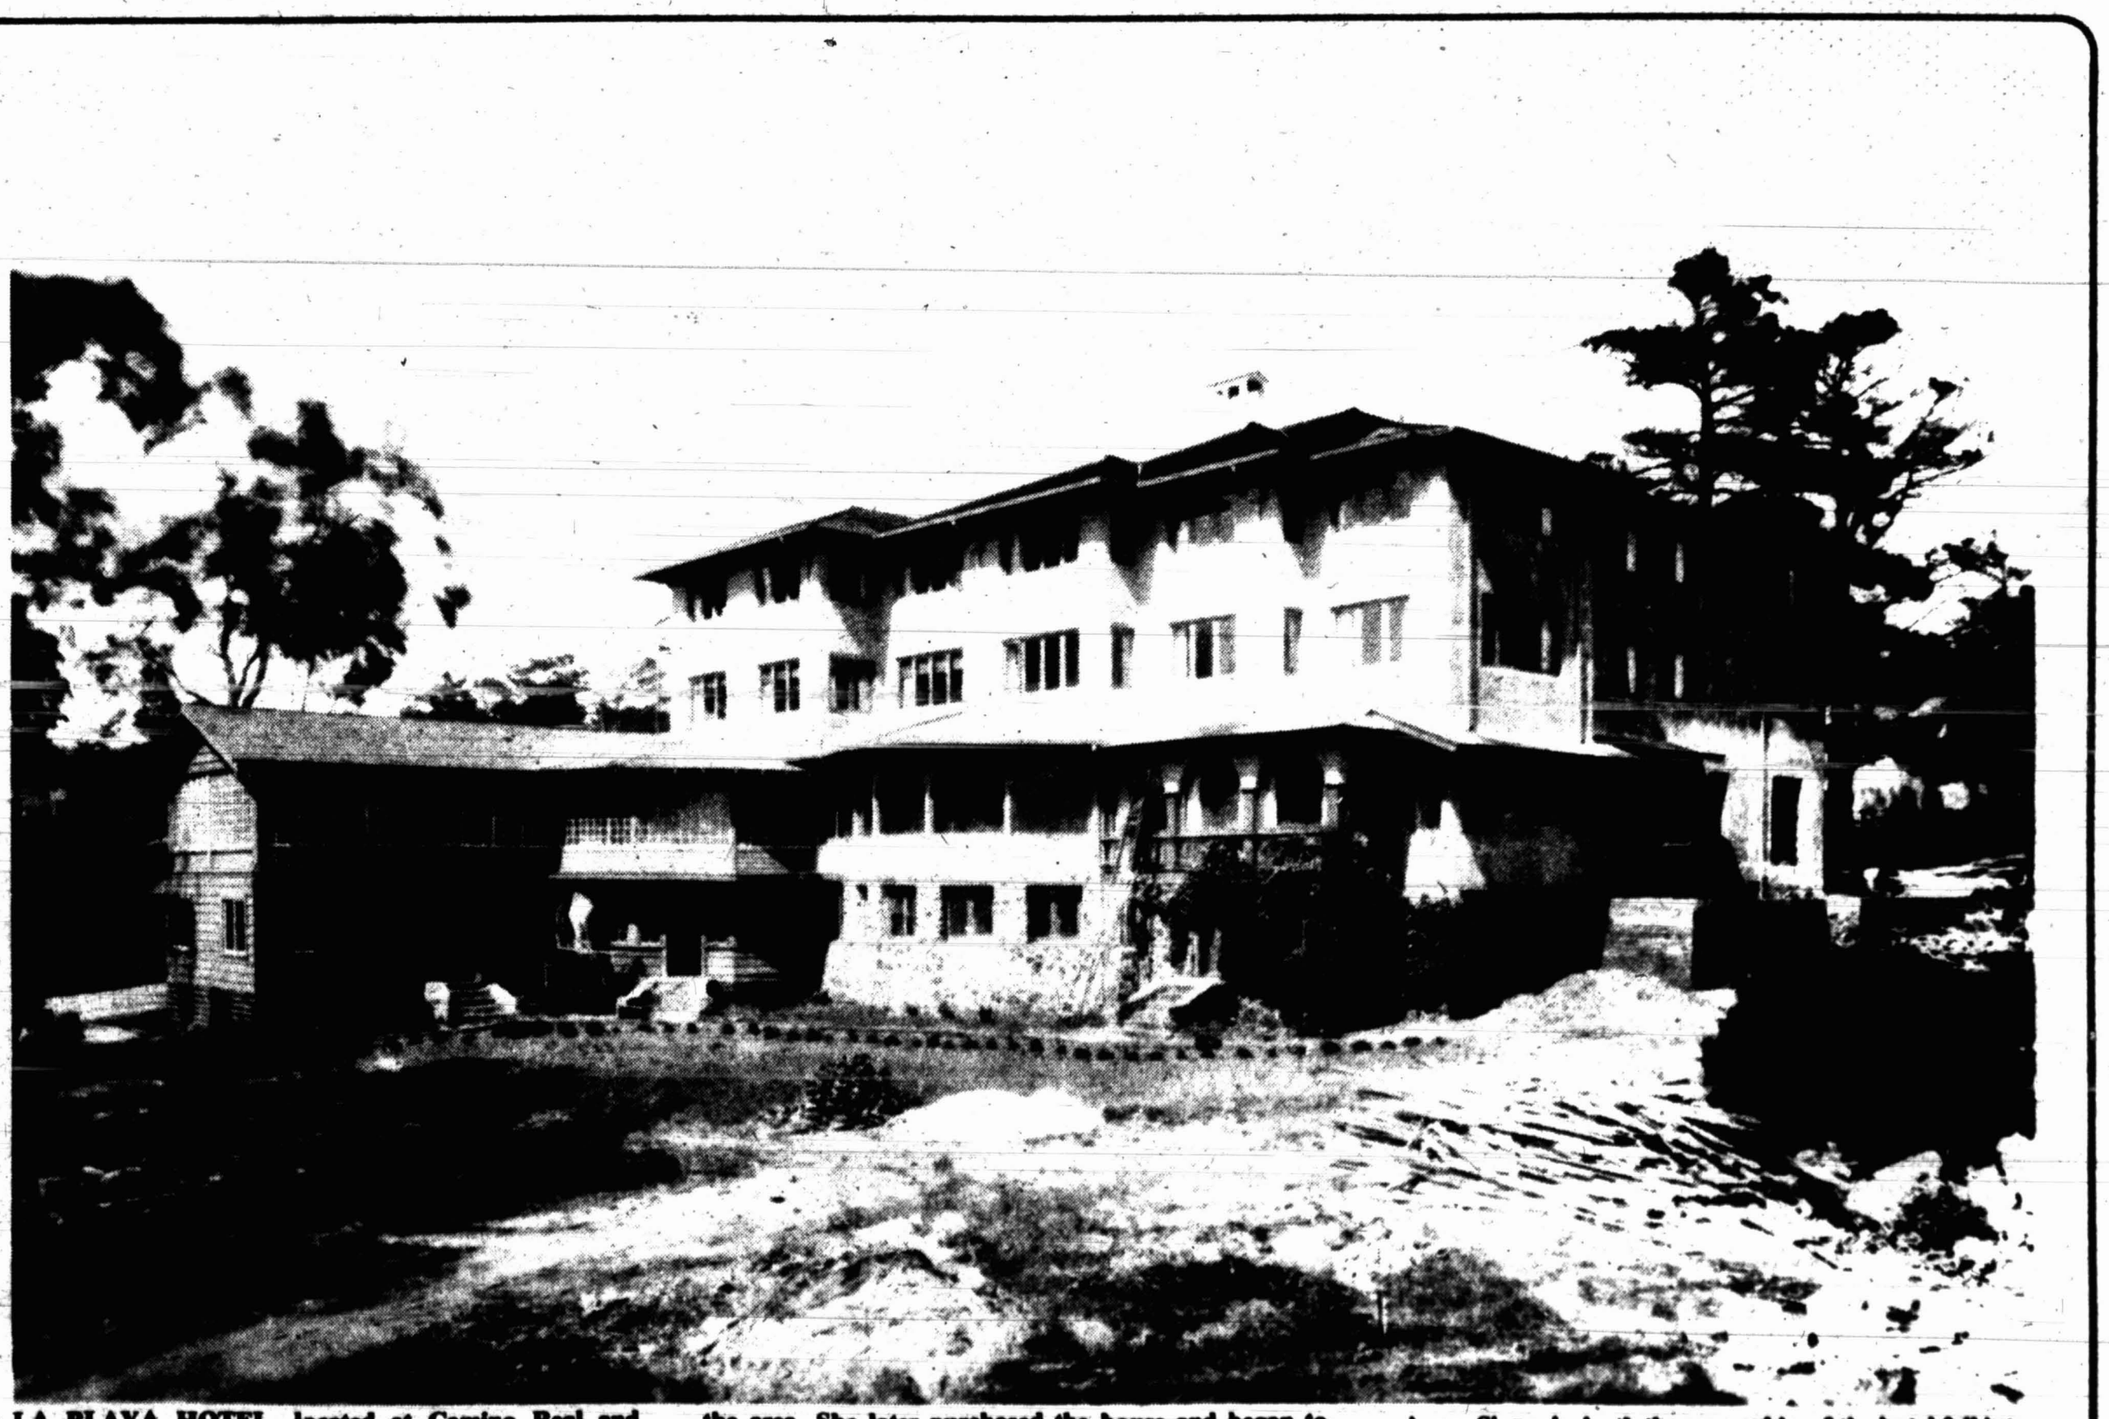
Carmel Mayor Barney Laiolo discussed the ramifications on Carmel of Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke's call for a moratorium on all adverse construction and modifications in the California coastal zone to preserve the California coast.

Laiolo said the city building inspectors were accepting applications for building permits because the city had received no official order to suspend the issuance of such permits.

Such an order would have to come from the state, he said. He felt that the existing uncertainty in the matter of building "was not a healthy situation."

GROSS ANNOUNCES

Leslie Gross, a project manager for the Carmel Realty Company, has announced he will be a candidate for one of the two Carmel City Council seats that will be on the April 14 ballot.



LA PLAYA HOTEL, located at Camino Real and Eighth, was originally a wood-frame home built by artist Chris Jorgensen, one of Carmel's first residents. Following his young wife's death in the early 1900s, Jorgensen leased the home to Agnes D. Signor and left the area. She later purchased the house and began to add rooms in the rambling style of the Winchester mansion, renting them to boarders. The adobe portion was constructed approximately 50 years ago. Upon Agnes Signor's death the ownership of the hotel fell into the hands of Fred and Harrison Godwin, her grandnephews, who owned La Playa until 10 years ago when it was sold to Bud Allen.

THE OPENING SCENES of Cities of the Future put viewers right in the middle of a noisy, crowded, polluted city at its worst. Then a compact version of the history of cities is presented through animation showing how the city existed long before the industrial era. Through many examples of urban planning and renewal in cities such as Brasilia, Reston, Philadelphia, Miami, Montreal, and Stockholm, the film clearly shows that cities are the bridges between the centuries and between the generations. The film points out how years of growing urbanization have brought worsening conditions of pollution, slums and congestion. We see the creative planning and exciting new ideas now in progress to surmount these problems.

This is part of the regular Thursday Brown Bag Cinema to be presented in the Leonard Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center on Feb. 21 at 1 p.m.

The second film to be shown that day is called Navajo: The Last Red Indians. The Navajo—America's largest and most enduring Indian tribe—have kept their native language. Forty thousand of them still speak no English. And only recently has their language been written since their culture has been handed down verbally through the elders of the tribe—the medicine men.

This film is about the Navajo's fight to preserve their way of life against the inroads of the white man's culture. It contains many exclusive and uncensored scenes of Navajo rituals and ceremonies. The photography and many of the sequences are splendid; they give a true feeling for the people and their land. Some of the meanings of culture are brought out in a striking and original way. The interplay of personality and culture is vividly stated as is also the assault upon them from the modern world.

This film looks at the people with respect and shows that cultural respect can preserve great power for a people if its importance is realized. It is timely, informative, filled with empathy and understanding.

Plan to come at noon, bring a brown bag lunch, and join us. Sunset Center provides the coffee. Lunch is enjoyed on the terrace on fine days and in the Chapman Room when the weather is inclement. At 1 p.m., we move down to the Leonard Carpenter Hall for the films. There are no reservations needed nor tickets required.

THE CARMEL FESTIVAL of Dance will present the R'wanda Lewis Afro-American Dance Company as part of its regular series on SAturday, March 1 at 8 p.m.

Ms. Lewis, through her artistic directorship of the R'wanda Lewis Afro-American Dance Company, has added a new dimension to dance on the West Coast. She relocated in the Southern California area in 1965 after a long and distinguished career in the New York City area where she was born.

In the early years of her career, Ms. Lewis spent five years of her training at the Katherine Dunham School of Dance in New York City. While at the Dunham School, she received a scholarship award to maintain her study at Dunham's. This training included extensive study under such notables in dance as Katherine Dunham, Todd Bolender, Lenwood Morris, Sevilla Fort, Claude Marchant and Tally Beatty. During her years with the Dunham School, she also performed throughout the East Coast with the Dunham Experimental Dance Theater.

In addition to her studies at the Dunham School, Ms. Lewis also extensively studied at the New Dance Group in New York City. At the New Dance Group, she received Graham technique under Donald McKayle and Betty Osgood, Weidman technique under Charles Weidman and Hindu dance under Hadassah. She spent one year of study in classical ballet at the Ballet Theater and another at the Ballet Arts in Carnegie Hall. Other studies and training in New York included two years of classical Russian ballet under Lensky and a summer seminar at Jacob's Pillow.

After completion of this extensive training in New York, Ms. Lewis remained in the New York area in both a teaching and performing capacity until early 1965. She taught modern primitive for two years at the Dunham School and five years of Afro technique at her own studio. Ms. Lewis later formed her own company and studio in Harlem and while there presented both solo and company performances at the Museum of Natural History, Howard University, Hunter College, Brooklyn Academy of Music, the United Nations and Carnegie Hall. Ms. Lewis also performed as a dancer/actress for three years on Broadway and off-Broadway productions.

Ms. Lewis relocated in the Los Angeles area in 1965 and launched a second and equally distinguished career in movies and television from 1965 to 1968. She studied at the Desilu Professional Theater Workshop and the Lawrence Merrick Theater Workshop. Her film and television credits include Made in Paris, several television commercials and her own 13-week series on KTTV, Channel 11 Metro-Media in Los Angeles entitled Expansion. She was also the hostess for several productions of Let's Rap on KTTV.

In 1968 she organized her current company in Los Angeles. Through her leadership the company has received national fame for its outstanding contributions to both the concert field and the community as well. Under her artistic direction the company has received numerous grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the California Arts Council and has developed special workshops and programs for community endeavors. These accomplishments along with the more than 2,000 concert presentations of her company have begun still another phase of her career.

There are still some reserved seats available for this dance presentation. Reservations can be made by calling the Sunset office at 624-3996. Tickets are $6.75 and $5.75.

The wine connoisseur

"I never like to taste the wine without some bread first"

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

SOMETIMES A CASUAL remark, like a seed falling into fertile ground, can grow into impressive being.

Several years ago I dropped by La Scala restaurant in Beverly Hills to talk with its celebrated proprietor, Jean Leon. He's not only host to constant crowds of the "beautiful people" but is a winemaker of international renown.

His vineyard and winery, Chateau Leon, at Pla del Panades a few miles outside of Barcelona, in Spain, has been producing Cabernet Sauvignon and Chardonnay which rivals those vineyards in France from which he took the cuttings.

•

IT WAS MID-AFTERNOON. We were talking about a trip to China in the months ahead.

"How about a glass of wine?" Fine.

With his customary mercurial speed, he left the table, returned with a bottle of Louis Jadot Corton Charlemagne 1977. It was a big wine, the perfume rising from the glass as it was poured, at cellar temperature.

It was that quiet time in the restaurant, between lunch and dinner crowds, the few moments when any restaurateur can relax.

As he put down the bottle, a hand flew up, commanding a pause, even before we might taste the wine. He signaled to one of the waiters. "Please bring us some rolls and butter. I never like to taste wine without some bread first."

That was it. Ever since, when I order a bottle of white wine as an aperitif while scanning the menu in a restaurant, I look around for the bread and butter first. A habit has been formed, born of Jean Leon's casual but meaningful gesture.

The wine that day? It was magnificent, of course, and led on to a sampling of his own Chardonnay from Chateau Leon and another from Chateau St. Jean in California.

•

ON A QUICK RETURN to New Orleans, in a swing south to Miami, we had time for a quiet dinner with another restaurateur, Jack Cosner, architect-turned-French Quarter host, of Restaurant Jonathan on Rampart Street.

Inside, the guest leaves the wrought-iron ambience of French New Orleans to be transported in time to the '20s, singing colors, flow and style of the moderne Art Deco.

Dennis Abbe created the entrance murals which segue into etched glass wall panels and dividers by Lalique, Sabino and Erte. There are dazzling touches like the glass case holding the jeweled tiara of Leontyne Price, from the Metropolitan Opera's production of "La Tosca."

•

AN ELEVATOR TAKES you up to the second-floor dining room.

We had no sooner been seated than a small basket of napkin-wrapped rolls was unobtrusively placed on the table. I put out a hand to touch it. It was warm. I could not resist. The sweet butter was there, too. But the rolls were like none I'd ever seen before. It was as though they'd been baked in two-inch diameter small tubes, about two inches tall, with light golden domes, and even lighter, almost white, but crispy sides.

Even before the Mirassou Chardonnay arrived, I'd consumed two, discovered Cosner's chief, Tom Cowman, had made them, as he does every morning.

I didn't count how many I ate through the dinner, but the bread basket was replenished more than once. I know I ate two with the bowl of cream of artichoke soup, and told my host that if I had nothing else, I could say I had dined well. We went on to Pompano Saute Meuniere, and I sopped up the plate with my last roll.

•

I WOKE UP THE next morning remembering those rolls. They had to be the best I'd ever tasted. There was that light blonde golden color, crispy, crunchy sides and golden top, the interior more like French bread. Would the chef give me the recipe?

I picked up the telephone. Chef Cowman was delighted that I liked the rolls, and immediately gave me a cut-down version of the recipe, for home-supply quantities. The pans in which they were baked? A regular muffin tin, with 24 or 12 or 6 "holes" would do.

RESTAURANT JONATHAN DINNER ROLLS

1/2 cup lard
1/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
2 cups hot water
4 tablespoons yeast
5 or 6 cups all-purpose flour
2 whole eggs
egg/milk wash for glaze

Melt lard, sugar, salt in hot water. Cool to lukewarm. Dissolve yeast in a little of the lukewarm water. Make a batter with 2 or 3 cups of the flour, adding the slightly beaten eggs and yeast. Continue to add flour until you have a fairly workable dough. Turn out onto floured board, and knead until it is satiny and smooth and not sticky. Let rise in a warm, draft-free place, covered, until double in bulk. Punch down. With a two-inch round biscuit cutter, or by hand, pinch off small egg-size amounts of the dough, and place them in greased or Pam-sprayed muffin tins. Cover and let rise for 1 hour or more, again until double in bulk. Brush with egg wash (1 egg beaten with 2 tablespoons of milk). Bake in preheated 400 degree oven for about 10 or 12 minutes. Depending upon size, recipe will make 36 to 48 rolls.

(If you like, just before baking, slash tops with a sharp knife, sprinkle with poppy seeds. Jonathan does not do this, but we could not resist the inviting touch to these golden wonders.)

RECORDING ARTIST Maria Muldaur, whose scorching blues and sophisticated jazz song styles have been heard on five solo albums, will appear in concert one night only, Sunday, Feb. 17 at The Club, 321D Alvarado St., Monterey.

One night only at The Club

Maria Muldaur in concert Sunday

Maria Muldaur, one moment a sophisticated jazz singer with a lilting voice and the next a gutsy blues queen, will perform in concert one night only, Sunday, Feb. 17 at The Club, 321D Alvarado St., Monterey. The performer, whose albums include Waitress in a Donut Shop and Sweet Harmony, and the gold single hit Midnight at the Oasis, will follow the band Folly's Pool, appearing at 8 p.m.

A versatile voice with delicate flutelike stylings and mother earth southern-based rhythms, Maria Muldaur has recorded five solo albums with one, her premiere LP, soaring to the top of the record charts and earning a gold.

Born and raised in the famed Greenwich Village of New York City, Maria recalls her growing years there as a "non-stop hootenanny" complete with a cornucopia of musical styles including "bluegrass, folk, blues guitar and Italian accordian players. It was like a miniature folk festival every Sunday afternoon," she said.

When Maria graduated from high school, the Friends of Old Time Music (FOOTM) was just being formed to "find Appalachian artists like Doc Watson and bring them up here for concerts." At the first FOOTM concert, she became enraptured with the fiddle playing of Gaither Carlton, Watson's father-in-law. Maria soon visited their clan in North Carolina where she learned fiddle from Gaither. Back in the village, she joined a group to make a jug band record. The recording, Even Dozen Jug Band, included Maria, John Sebastian and Steve Katz.

She later married Geoff Muldaur, a member of the Jim Kweskin Jug Band, and was soon asked to join. Six years later, when the band split up, Maria and Geoff recorded two albums. When their marriage faltered she made her first solo album, Maria Muldaur and by June of 1974 both the debut album and Midnight at the Oasis were gold.

Two albums followed. Then Maria decided to change her personal life. She slowed her pace and concentrated on family in Marin County. She has changed the focus of her career and now performs only in clubs, concert halls and theater along the West Coast from Vancouver to San Diego.

Her most recent album, Open Your Eyes, blends lullabies, sophisticated jazz and rhythm and blues and includes a guest performance by Stevie Wonder.

Tickets, at $12.50, may be reserved by phoning 646-9244.

Bergman film will screen in Monterey

Persona, Ingmar Bergman's award-winning film that focuses on the intense moral and spiritual ambiguity of two women, will be screened Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 19-20 by the Monterey Peninsula Film Society. The program will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the S.F.B. Morse Auditorium, 425 Van Buren St., Monterey.

Named best picture of 1967 by the National Society of Film Critics, Persona stars Liv Ullmann and Bibi Andersson who was named best actress by the Swedish Film Institute and the Film Critics.

Liv Ullman portrays a renowned stage actress who suffers a nervous breakdown and loses the ability to speak. She is sent to an isolated coastal spot where she is to be cared for by a nurse-companion (Bibi Andersson). An odd mechanism of mutual identification is set off and the actress comes to rely on the nurse for moral sustenance, a need which becomes almost physical. The film is in Swedish with English subtitles.

WIESE COMPLETES TRAINING AS TEACHER OF TRANSCENDENTAL MEDITATION

Walter F. Wiese, son of Vivian Zimmermann of Cypress Drive, Pebble Beach, has returned from Livingston Manor, N.Y., where on Nov. 11 he completed training as a teacher of the Transcendental Meditation program. He plans to teach on the Peninsula until he returns to Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa, to resume his graduate studies in education.

Wiese attended Carmel schools and graduated from Carmel High School in 1964. In 1967 he served in the U.S. Army 4th Division in Vietnam. His experience in Asia directed his interest and attention towards education, especially toward the area of development of consciousness and the cultivation of inner man as a means to alleviate human suffering and achieve a state of peace and fulfillment.

Finding the TM technique so simple, natural, and effective in his own life, Wiese decided in 1974 to become a teacher of the TM program. He will be giving free introductory lectures on the TM program to the public through the International Meditation Society, a non-profit, educational organization.

Hidden Valley Orchestra will present two concerts

The Hidden Valley Chamber Orchestra directed by conductor Stewart Robertson will present two concerts of chamber music Thursday and Friday, Feb. 14-15 in the Steinbeck Forum of the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey. A free concert, the final program of the Music at Noon series, will begin Thursday at 12:15 p.m. The final concert of the winter series will be presented Friday at 8 p.m.

Among the works to be performed by the 30-piece ensemble on Thursday are Paisiello's Overture to the Barber of Seville, Pastoral d'Ete by Honegger and Francaix's Divertimento.

Music director Stewart Robertson recently returned from his native Scotland where he was guest conductor of the Scottish National Orchestra. The Friday program he has selected will include Stravinsky's Pulcinella Suite, featuring new concertmaster Roy Malan; Prokofiev's Peter and the Wolf, narrated by Peter Meckel, director of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars; and the Overture to The Barber of Seville by Paisiello.

Roy Malan comes to the orchestra from the San Francisco Bay Area where he was concertmaster for the San Francisco Ballet Orchestra, the San Jose Symphony and the Colorado Chamber Orchestra as well as a member of the San Francisco Symphony.

Born in South Africa, Malan began studying the violin at age 4 and as a child prodigy played his first concerto with an orchestra when he was 10. In 1960, he moved to England and continued his studies at the Royal Academy of Music in London where he won all the solo violin competitions he entered. After leaving England, he attended the Juilliard School of music and the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia where his teachers included Efrem Zimbalist.

Boehm Quintette concert was ultimately devoid of nourishment

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

A LESS THAN TOP NOTCH woodwind quintet gave a generally introspective presentation of obscure and superficial music on Wednesday, Feb. 6, for the Chamber Music Society.

While the capacity Sunset Theater audience was treated to many lovely sounds and much ensemble smoothness, the concert was ultimately devoid of nourishment.

This deficiency was principally in the programming of the Boehm Quintette. The Mozart Fantasie in F Minor, K. 594 was one of several similar pieces Mozart wrote for the flute-clock, a mechanical organ whose pipes were supplied air by levers activated the same way the notes on a music box are sounded, with a cylinder studded with precisely positioned steel shafts. Pieces of this type were composed by Haydn, Danzi and Beethoven, and it has been fashionable at times to transcribe them for wind quintet.

But in this case, and as a flavor during the entire program, the whimsical character of the music was replaced by a serious concentration and deportment that suggested that there was profundity to be discovered here.

This did not seem a deliberate aspiration, but rather the result of the in-turning focus of the ensemble. The Boehm members seemed to be playing for themselves rather than for their audience. And there is an important difference.

•

THE PLAYING OF THE piece was felicitous and often tender, though there was some roughness in the allegro second movement.

The Wayne Peterson work, Metamorphoses, was well played and, by its composer, well made. But it was locked into that "modern" music sound that was so common during the '50s; a spikey, contrapuntal texture that made imitation of the neo-classic/Hindemith style.

The Deux pieces by Guy Ropartz was an autumn-hued excursion that was a charming and facile imitation of Ravel that was given a not cheerless realization by the Boehm.

•

THE PROGRAM'S LONGEST work, Quintet in B-flat by Heinrich Schmid, displayed numerous charms that reflected none of the greatness of the composer's teachers, Gustav Mahler and Arnold Schoenberg. Charm on charm, in the face of great music, is at least charming.

The printed program was interrupted by the inclusion of Two Portraits by John Lewis, Monterey Jazz Festival music director and keyboardist for the defunct Modern Jazz Quartet.

The piece turned out to be of a predictable style that was gently jazzy and restrained. Tidy syncopations and attractive instrumental exploitation gave it color and flavor.

Encores were two Irish folksong settings by the once formidable American composer, Henry Cowell.

•

HAVING HEARD GREAT things about Peter Zazofsky, the young violinist who appeared with the Santa Cruz County Symphony last weekend, we made pilgrimage to the concert at Resurrection Church in Aptos on Sunday afternoon.

We were not disappointed.

Here was an artist of enormous dimensions. Zazofsky's teachers included his father, George Zazofsky and violinist Joseph Silverstein.

After leaving the Curtis Institute in 1977, the young Zazofsky conquered several competitions, including the famous Montreal Violin Competition of 1977. Already an international artist, Zazofsky played the Bruch Violin Concerto in G Minor with the Santa Cruz.

•

FOLLOWING THE BROODING orchestral introduction, Zazofsky established a strong and intense opening statement. As a striking complement to vigorous and flashy bravura sequences he displayed especially sensitive and deeply felt lyricism in the more expressive passages. He molded the singing phrases to deep beauty and compelling subtlety. Zazofsky played with self-possessed concentration and confident sureness, exhibiting a striking and distinctive tone.

Despite chronic distractions in the hall, he maintained a clear involvement with the music and, in the adagio slow movement, poured both mind and heart into his song.

In the final movement he played with carefree high spirits and unabashed virtuosity.

•

CONDUCTOR GEORGE Barati led his orchestra with force and vigor, providing well-controlled support and balance for the soloist and exploiting the ensemble's strengths with consummate skill.

The audience was thrilled and rewarded Zazofsky with a standing ovation. He, in turn, paid back the favor with a splendid realization of Fritz Kreisler's Recitative and Scherzo Caprice.

Borne entirely of his own concentration he played with impulsively expressive phrasing, bold style and audacious virtuosity. In all his bow was the magic wand, sustaining taut continuity and shimmering articulation. When he finished, the late afternoon sun fully bathed him in a celestial spotlight that matched the brilliance of his playing.

•

PETER ZAZOFSKY IS definitely a talent our Monterey Peninsula music societies should engage, while his services are still affordable.

Incidentally, the concert opened with Holiday Overture by Elliott Carter, a rarely heard example of the composer's early style. The piece dates from 1944, seven years before his first string quartet brought him major stature.

The overture is a slightly over-long, multi-mood piece for large orchestra that develops considerable energy and excitement. It has touches of Samuel Barber and Aaron Copland but unmistakably displays a strong new talent.

Structured around a theme whose first interval is a descending fourth, the work is richly scored, complex and economical. The Santa Cruz gave it a strong though not flawless reading.

Scott MacClelland is classical music director for KWAV 96.9.

The Monterey County Development Center for Handicapped Children is currently seeking volunteers to aid in its swimming program. The Development Center, which serves severely handicapped children, recently accepted a donation from the Monterey County Association for the Retarded. This donation enables the children to receive the services of a certified swimming instructor. The program will take place in a nearby heated and enclosed shallow water pool. According to Gari Ann Truscott, head teacher, "The volunteer's swimming ability is not important. We just need extra hands to help our teachers in and around the pool area." Prospective volunteers may receive more information by calling the center in Seaside at 394-0563.

Patronage on Monterey Peninsula Transit last month shot up a record 86,202 passengers over January 1979. A total of 233,168 rode on MPT buses, compared to 146,966 one year ago. The increase amounted to 59 percent. "People have decided that the bus line is a better deal than a gasoline line," concluded MPT Chairman Charles W. Benson. Most of the increased ridership is the result of heavier loads on routes which have been in operation for several years. However, Benson added that MPT is operating 20 percent more service than one year ago, and that patronage is growing quickly on new routes to Carmel Valley and along Highway 68. Normally, MPT experiences a seasonal decline in patronage during the winter months, followed by gains during the spring and summer. This year, however, MPT picked up more than 33,000 additional monthly passengers between August and January.

The workshop instructors include Ansel Adams, Carmel; Marsha and Michael Burns, Seattle; Judith Golden, San Francisco; Richard Misrach, Emeryville, and Olivia Parker, Manchester, Mass.

Ansel Adams was honored in 1979 by a major retrospective exhibition of his landscape photographs at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City and by the publication of his book Yosemite and the Range of Light (New York Graphic Society). He is a founding member of The Friends of Photography and is currently chairman of the organization's board of trustees. Adams will not be one of the small group leaders, but will make special presentations during the workshop and conduct a tour of his Carmel studio.

Marsha Burns is a freelance photographer living and working in Seattle. She studied at the University of Washington and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Among her exhibitions are major one-woman shows at the Seattle Art Museum in 1979 and the Susan Spiritus Gallery in Newport Beach. A 1978 recipient of a National Endowment for the Arts Photographer's Fellowship, she uses a large-format camera to produce primarily mysterious and softly lit nudes and portraits in her studio.

Michael Burns earned his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Washington and his master's degree from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. His recent exhibits include one-person shows at the Silver Image Gallery in Seattle and the University of Oregon Museum of Art. His finely detailed photographs are contact-printed from 8x10-inch negatives; his photographic interests include arrangements of objects created inside his studio as well as architectural and landscape images made in Seattle and the surrounding area.

Judith Golden is currently living and working in San Francisco. She taught photography at UCLA from 1975-79 and has presented lectures and workshops throughout the country. A portfolio of her photographs was included in the 1978 Time-Life Photography Yearbook and she was the recipient of the 1979 NEA Photographer's Fellowship. Golden's imagery is primarily autobiographical, exploring the role of women in society.

Richard Misrach received Photographer's Fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts in 1973 and 1977 and was awarded the Ferguson Grant by The Friends of Photography in 1976. His work was included in the 1978 Museum of Modern Art exhibition Mirrors and Windows.

Misrach primarily photographs at dusk and at night, using flash to illuminate objects selectively before his camera. He has photographed exclusively in color for the past three years, using the plant forms of Hawaii and the South as subject matters for his images.

Olivia Parker graduated with a degree in art history from Wellesley College in 1963 and began her work in photography in the early 1970s. Parker's work has been exhibited widely throughout the United States including a show at The Friends of Photography in 1979. Her portfolio of original prints, Ephemera, was released in 1978; her book Signs of Life was published the same year by David Godine.

Parker makes contact prints from large-format negatives which she tones to achieve a subtle range of shading. Her photographs depict unusual and thought-provoking objects and arrangements, which she photographs in her studio and in the area around her Manchester home.

The tuition for the four-day workshop is $195. Participants are responsible for film, cameras, tripods and other equipment for use during field sessions and for arranging their own accommodations. Facilities will be available for changing film holders but no darkroom work will be scheduled during the workshop.

Enrollment is limited and applications will be accepted in the order they are received. Deadline for applications is March 17.

For further workshop information write The Friends of Photography, P.O. Box 239, Carmel, Calif. 93921 or phone 624-6330.

During the summer of 1867, Carleton E. Watkins, a prominent San Francisco photographer, carried a mammoth glass-plate camera through the beautiful near-wilderness of the Columbia River and to the growing cities of Portland, Oswego and Oregon City in Oregon's Willamette Valley. Five years later he published 51 of the photographs in a large presentation album.

An exhibit of all of the prints from the album titled Photographs of the Columbia River and Oregon, will open Friday, Feb. 15 with a preview reception at The Friends of Photography Gallery in Sunset Center, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to attend the opening from 8-10 p.m.

Born in Oneonta, N.Y., in 1829, Watkins moved to California in the 1850s where he established a photography studio in San Francisco and was among the first to photograph in the Yosemite area. Landscape photographs by Watkins which were exhibited in New York and Paris earned him a gold medal at the 1867 Paris International Exhibition.

By 1875, financial difficulties forced him to give up his studio along with many of his negatives to another San Francisco photographer. Watkins was able to re-establish himself, however, and he continued to work into the 1890s. The 1906 earthquake destroyed his studio and the negatives and prints which were in it.

Because information about Watkins and his images are less accessible than those of many other 19th century Western photographers, he has been largely ignored by photographic historians. Watkins is currently receiving a reassessment which has defined him as one of the most significant 19th century American photographers.

The Oregon and Columbia River images represent the high point of his career. The album prints, contact-printed from the 18x22-inch glass negative, will be installed in the gallery in the order that they were published in the original album.

The photographs may be viewed through March 16 from 1-5 p.m. daily.

For more information, phone 624-6330.

Zantman Galleries show

'Three Best Paintings' exhibit opens Saturday

The Three Best Paintings of the Year by Each of Our American Artists, the sixth annual exhibit which spotlights more than 40 American artists, opens with a preview reception Saturday, Feb. 16 at the Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth and Mission, Carmel. Many of the artists will attend the reception for the Washington's Birthday weekend show from 5-8 p.m.

Included in the long roster of participants are many whose works receive solo exhibitions at Zantman Galleries during the year. Thomas Wells, Frank Ashley, Robert Clark, Dorothy Cutter, Hu Chi Chung, Joan Murphy, Gene and Loran Speck, George Molnar and E. John Robinson are among the artists who have had one-man shows here.

New to Zantman Galleries last year was Kipp Stewart, whose large contemporary, representational paintings were enthusiastically received. A designer since the early 1950s, he has worked in furniture, architecture, sculpture and paintings and has been widely published. His art works have been shown in museums in New York, Pasadena, Santa Barbara and Monterey and since 1974 he has had nine one-man shows.

A second artist who exhibited his paintings with Zantman Galleries for the first time last year was R. Stephens Wright, a 76-year-old artist whose traditional style was inspired by the master Rembrandt. He is a graduate of Harvard University, where he won the Bower's Prize for best paintings of the year, the John Harvard Scholarship and was elected Phi Beta Kappa.

After graduation from Harvard, Wright attended the Art Institute of Chicago and studied etching under Edouard Leon, president of the Salon des Beaux Arts, Paris. He lived in Paris from 1927-1934 and had his first one-man show there in 1932 at the Galerie Marcel Guiot. His dry point, San Fernando Mission, was selected for the cover of Fine Prints of the Year, 1937, and is one of the eight etchings and dry points by the artist in the print collection of the Smithsonian Institution.

Other artists whose works will be on view are Brad Schmidt, Eugene Baker, Diane Wolcott, Dorothy Fitzgerald, Bernard Wynne, Prunella, Sandy Scott, Carina Ryan, Gael Baldock.

Leo Sauer, Patti Canaris, Harrison Rucker, Jan Van Daalen, Helen Kunic, Jim Miller, Warren Preston, Don Irwin, Emily Burns, Phyllis Londraville.

Seventh annual one-woman show of Caswell art opens Saturday

The seventh annual one-woman show of paintings by Helen Caswell will open Saturday, Feb. 16 with a preview reception at Miner's Gallery Americana, Lincoln and Sixth, Carmel. The artist will be on hand to greet visitors from 4-7 p.m.

The California artist's new collection of paintings captures the pathos and wonder of childhood. The muted yellow, green, brown and gold in her works reflect the beauty of the natural world and project her subjects as symbols of children everywhere — children preoccupied, intent, dreaming or lost in the world of make-believe.

The mother of five, Mrs. Caswell is the author of six books, five of which she illustrated.

Among her new paintings are Fiddler at the Gate, Austrian Wash Day, Company for Breakfast, Spring, Flight of Friends and Lake Geneva.

The Helen Caswell exhibition will remain on view through February; gallery hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. daily.

Flying Bridge

The minute you turn off Carmel Valley Road onto Rancho Rio Vista, you begin to climb. A few blocks up, Segundo Drive bends off to the left, and shortly you come to No. 4145. From the road all you see is roofs and a profusion of tortured, winding oaks. The path down is a voyage of discovery and well worth it when the door opens.

Inside and out, the walls are an artful blending of rough-sawn redwood and adobe-type bricks. There are two levels superbly joined by open areas and a free-form staircase. You enter on the top level and come into a galleried space surrounding the stairwell. Above you the roof of natural cedar planks, supported by dark redwood beams, ascends like an inverted pyramid to a great square skylight. The far corner is all glass, reaching 16 feet from the living room below to the roof above. These dramatic glass walls open out to a small canyon, more gnarled oaks and constant bird songs.

On the top level are (1) the dining area opening to a small deck and looking down into the lower living room; (2) the tile floored kitchen with warm brown cabinets and counters; (3) the master bedroom, skylighted, opening to the deck on one side, and (4) the master bath with huge shower, jalousie windows, tiled floor and counters on the other; (5) a second bath with skylight, tub, bamboo wainscoting and dark-tiled counters and floor; and (6) two other bedrooms, one skylighted, with floor to ceiling windows overlooking the canyon.

The open stair descends to the 20 × 20 living room, glass walled on 2 sides, adobe on the other 2. A two-sided fireplace projects from the far corner, and the eerie trees seem almost part of the room.

There's an all-year October sort of feeling here—all browns and rusts and tones of orange, with carpeting in complementary colors. It's private yet close in, a remarkable setting of your very own. Oh yes, and a hidden studio just off the carport, ideal for artist, writer or photographer. $245,000.
